DYSPEPSIA AND INDIGESTION.
DOCTORS recommend EARL'S FLUID PEPSINE. Sir C. CAMERON, M.D., Analytical Report:—"I can strongly recommend Earl's Fluid Pepsine as a Reliable Remedy for Indigestion and Dyspepsia. It contains the digestive properties of the gastric juices in a highly concentrated, permanent, and reliable form. It causes even the toughest beef to become digested; it is peculiarly suited for invalids and young children, and is superior both in strength and efficacy to any other preparation of Pepsine." MARKET REPORTS.

CATTLE.

LONDON, Monday.—There were 200 more fat cattle on offer than last week; trade ruled slow all day at a reduction in price of ½d. per lb. Of the cattle weighed, four prime quality Devons of 10 cwts. each realised 62/10, and two good Herefords of simular weight 59/4 per live cwt., while some useful Herefords of 72 stones sold at 7/3 per live stone of 14 lbs. Average dead weight quotation, per 8lbs.:—Herefords, first 7/10, seconds 7/3; shorthorns, first 7/8, second 7/-; Welsh runts, first 78/- second 72/-; Devons, first 7/10, second 7/4. Irish cattle sold as low as at last week's rates of 6/2 per 8lbs. Sheep and lambs penned in larger numbers; demand slow, most descriptions of sheep being ½d. per lb. cheaper, while Scotch sheep were ½d. per lb. lower on the week. Fat ewes were in very poor request at ½d. per lb. cheaper than at last week's market, owing partly to large arrivals of Dutch mutton at the dead meat market. Lambs also sold slowly at ½d. per lb. less money on the week. Quotations per 8lbs.:—Downs, first 8/10, second 8/2; longwools, first 7/10, second 7/2; crossbreds, first 8/8, second 8/-; lambs, first 10/-, second 9/-. Numbers in the market:—Cattle, 1,377; sheep and lambs, 6,145.

BIRKENHEAD, Monday.—The stock in the Birkenhead lairages to-day comprised 2,050 cattle and 3,000 sheep and lambs. The trade for cattle was very slow, the improvement reported on Friday last not being maintained. Prices were about 1d. per head lower. Sheep and lambs met a better trade, the shorter supplies accounting for this. Best cattle 10½d. to 10½d., other classes 10d. to 8d., mutton 9d. to 11½d., lamb 1/- to 1/1 per lb., in sink. At the dressed beef section, with heavier supplies, trade was slower at the following prices—Sides 5/8 to 6/- per stone of 8 lbs., or 8½d. to 9d. per lb.

GLASGOW, Monday.—Messrs. Hegarty and Kelly had large supplies of fat cattle at their sale in Merklands to-day (Monday). There was a fair attendance of customers present. Bullocks and heifers met a very slow, dragging trade, and a clearance was very hard to effect, several lots being unsold. Bulls and cows, however, continue to be in active request, and all got sold at satisfactory prices. Irish sheep and lambs were a smaller offering, and met a good inquiry, recent high rates being maintained.—(Advt.)

BASIC SLAG.—Market is strong, and a further advance in price has taken place for October delivery. We are offering wholesale "Leeds" 42 per cent. quality, which is the highest grade of Basic Slag made. Also Alberts 32 per cent., 30 per cent., and 24 per cent. Citric soluble qualities. These can be obtained retail from Manure Merchants in all towns. This is the last week for obtaining delivery at September prices.—Wm. Hooper and Co., Ltd., Dublin.—(Advt.)

GRAIN.

FLOATING GRAIN CARGOES (BALTIC), Monday.—WHEAT—In the cargo section holders required full to dearer prices, but buyers showed no inclination to follow the upward trend. LIVERPOOL, Monday.—Higher quotations from Winnipeg and Chicago caused a firmer feeling in WHEAT, and c.i.f. parcels were 6d. per qr. dearer during early trading. Offerings were made sparingly on higher freights and with more prospects of a settlement of the mill operatives' strike, 1/- advance was realised despite heavier shipments to the United Kingdom and increase in local stocks here for next week. MAIZE strong on better American advices and higher Argentine freights, and with shorts covering and good buying prices advanced 1/- to 1/9 per qr. WHEAT on the spot firm, and prices raised 2d. per cental for all descriptions. MAIZE—Spot parcels sparingly offered. PROVISIONS.

LIVERPOOL, Monday.—BACON—The firmness in the bacon market here for all descriptions of bacon became more pronounced aided by the strength and higher prices for live hogs at Chicago and recent limited arrivals here. A more confident feeling was displayed by buyers, who operated with less reserve for consumptive requirements, while local traders were also in the market to some little extent. Offerings were made sparingly in view of decreasing stocks, and prices tended upwards, clear bellies being raised 1/- cwt. on best brands, and Cumberlands 1/- cwt. for all cuts. Irish, Danish, and Canadian firm, with moderate inquiry at late rates. SHOULDERS in improved request at the recent advance for square cut, and late rates for other descriptions. HAMS moved more freely at hardening rates, short cut American being held for 1/- cwt. more money in some instances. LARD on the spot showed no material change in value of prime steam or American refined, trading being of only a moderate character, chiefly in the latter. CHEESE firm, and a moderate business reported at about 1/- per cwt. advance for finest white and coloured. BUTTER still scarce, and prices were raised about 1/- per cwt. EGGS firm, and fairly active at higher figures. REFINED LARD FUTURES—Following Chicago advices this market opened 1½d. per cwt. dearer, but afterwards fluctuated moderately as buyers or sellers preponderated. Fair quantities changed hands, and although prices finished under best, final rates still marked an advance of 1½d. to 4½d. per cwt. at the end of early session. Sales covered September at 82/-, 82/3, 82/-, October 81/6, 81/7½, 81/6, 81/9, November 81/7½, 81/9, January 79/-, while December was quoted 80/7½ to 81/- per cwt.

DRIED BREWERS' GRAINS meet a fairly active inquiry, and are without change in value at £9 for ale, and £8 10/- for mixed.

Laundry Labour Trouble

The Proprietors of the Metropolitan Laundry regret having further to advise their Customers that the portion of their Staff anxious to work has been prevented by violence and intimidation, so that there will be greater delay in delivering the linen than was anticipated.

The Workers have demanded a 25 per cent. increase, although the piece work rates paid to Ironers were almost identical with those in force in the London Laundries.

DUBLIN POLICE COURTS.

NORTHERN DIVISION.
(BEFORE MR. MACINERNEY.)

Ernest J. Jordan, aged 21, 60 Roslyn street, London road, Belfast, was again charged with loitering in the Royal Barracks for the purpose of committing a felony; that, being a suspicious character, he was found in enclosed premises, with housebreaking implements in his possession, with the illegal possession of a military riding breeches and a boy scout's uniform; with breaking into a room of Marlborough Barracks, and stealing a safety razor, worth one guinea, and a silver watch worth five guineas, belonging to Major Woods, of the 5th Lancers; with the illegal possession of other officers' property to the value of about £2; with illegally pawning Major Wood's watch in Lowry's pawn office, Buckingham street; with obtaining 5/- from Sergeant-Major Norris by falsely representing himself as a boy scout appointed to collect money for the purpose of erecting a marquee.

Evidence of the offences had already been given. Private Murphy, Major Woods' servant, now identified his master's watch.

Having pleaded guilty, Jordan was sentenced to four months' imprisonment for the larceny, and to two months for having been in illegal possession of the military property.

The Magistrate observed that Police Sergeant 17 D had worked up the case very effectively.

SOUTHERN DIVISION.
(BEFORE MR. DRURY.)

Albert Bennett and Montague P. Holmes, who gave as their address 46 Great Brunswick street, and said to be betting-men, were charged by Detective-Officers Martin Forrest and Thomas Mannion with being in illegal possession of a number of articles of plate and jewellery. Bennett was charged with having illegally in his possession, and attempting to pledge in Gorman's Pawn Office, 19 Winetavern street, fifteen antique silver spoons and a silver sugar tongs. Mr. Gibson, manager of the office, stopped the goods, and reported the matter to the police. Bennett was further charged with being in the illegal possession of a watch, two brooches, two pendants, half a dozen keys, and other articles. At his residence the detectives found a gold brooch representing two swallows, and a silver-mounted pen-knife. Holmes was charged with being in possession of a gold watch and chain, two gold rings, and other articles, for which he failed to account.

Bennett told the magistrate that he had purchased the silver articles from a man at the Curragh races.

The Magistrate remanded the accused men for a week.

Bennett was further charged with assaulting Constable Murphy (130 A) in Chancery lane, as he was being escorted by that policeman after his arrest. Having tripped the constable up he endeavoured to get away, but was captured. He was also remanded on this charge.

Robert Fox, a well-dressed young man, in the employment of Mr. Wm. Young, dairy owner, Churchtown, Dundrum, Co. Dublin, was charged by Constable B 65 with throwing stones, to the danger of the public, at Charlemont Bridge, between 11 and 12 o'clock on Saturday night.

The Magistrate said that he was determined to put down such outrageous conduct, and that he would remand the defendant for a week.

Alderman Quaid, solicitor for Fox, appealed to his worship to deal with the case. He called the defendant's employer, who gave him an excellent character, and said that he would go bail for his good behaviour.

The Magistrate fined the defendant £1, and ordered him to find bail in £10, or to undergo two months' imprisonment. The bail was forthcoming.

Patk. Kehoe, 30 St. David's terrace, Naas, Co. Kildare, was charged with endeavouring to force his way upon the departure platform of the Kingsbridge Terminus on Sunday evening; also with assaulting ticket-checker James Lynch by butting him with his head in the chest and knocking him down. He was fined 40/-, with the alternative of one month's imprisonment. Mr. James Brady prosecuted Kehoe on behalf of the Great Southern and Western Railway Company.

KILBEGGAN MEETING, YESTERDAY.

While it was by no means exciting, the racing at Kilbeggan yesterday was very enjoyable, and furnished a pleasant day's outing for a large company. Backers commenced the day badly, being astray in their calculations over the first two races, but subsequently they fared better, although in two instances they had to lay the odds. Their discomfiture on two occasions was brought about by horses trained at Eastwell by Mr. H. Ussher, who brought off a nice double with Mozzel and The Cardinal, both of whom were ridden by James Hogan, senior. For the Brusna Plate Jenny Jones and Chancey Fellow disputed favouritism, and the first-named made a bold bid for victory, but she was unable to concede the weight to Lady Pam, who challenged Mr. M'Keever's mare at the last hurdle, and got the better of a fine finish by a head. The favourite for the Midland Plate, Sharavogue, brought about a second reverse for backers, for she could only finish third to the 5 to 1 chance, Mozzel, who fought it out with the outsider, Jim Carnagh, from below the distance, but scored easily enough in the end. In the Loughnagore Plate Sparkle made some amends for previous disappointments by making practically all the running, and defeating the Athlone winner, Poor Willy, by a length. Odds were laid on Privit for the Stand Plate, in which Major M'Calmont's mare gave a finished display, the issue being in her safe keeping a long way from home; and Bolo easily accounted for the opposition in the Tally-Ho Plate, but neither Happy Go Lucky II. nor Yours II. could improve on last year's running in the Kilbeggan Cup, which was won by The Cardinal, who beat Kentstown and the favourite, Happy Go Lucky II., in a canter. WEXFORD MURDER CHARGE.

A WOMAN IN CUSTODY.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

WEXFORD, MONDAY.

Further light was thrown on the shocking affair that occurred in Main street, Wexford, on Saturday night, when Barbara Berry, a tinker's wife, was stabbed to death, at an inquest held at Wexford Workhouse to-day by Deputy Coroner Roche, J.P.

John Berry, husband of the deceased woman, deposed that he and his wife had only just come down the town. She handed an infant to him to mind, and when he looked round for his wife she was stretched on the roadway.

Margaret Clowry deposed that she heard Anastatia Whitmore arguing with Mrs. Berry. The latter asked Whitmore why should she have said something about her, and Mrs. Whitmore smashed a jug on Mrs. Berry's head.

Mary McCormack stated that she saw Mrs. Whitmore run into a victualler's shop and snatch a knife off the counter. The woman ran out and stabbed Mrs. Berry in the left breast, and when the witness shouted, "Oh, Lord, the woman is stabbed," Whitmore turned to attack her, but when she saw the police she stopped. Whitmore fired the knife, and it barely missed witness's head.

Margaret Connors stated that when Whitmore came out of the butcher's shop, witness shouted, "Mind the knife," but before anyone could interfere Mrs. Berry was stabbed. The women were not abusing each other, and were sober.

Michael Hynes swore he saw Mrs. Berry strike Mrs. Whitmore, and later saw Mrs. Whitmore stab Mrs. Berry.

Private George Langman, Munster Fusiliers, deposed that later that night Mrs. Whitmore told him to ask the boys to forgive her. She told him that when words she did not like were used about meat that she had got she took something like his bayonet and indicated that she had stabbed another woman.

Dr. S. V. O'Connor and Dr. S. A. Furlong gave evidence that the wound pierced Mrs. Berry's heart, and she died from shock and hæmorrhage.

A verdict was returned that Mrs. Berry died from a wound inflicted by Mrs. Whitmore.

Mrs. Whitmore, at a special court before Mr. Jas. Fitzsimons, was charged with the murder of Mrs. Berry.

District Inspector O'Hara said that the prisoner stated that Mrs. Berry tormented her, and she did not know what happened. "I thought," she said, "I was among the soldiers, and that all the Germans were down on me."

The prisoner was remanded for eight days.

PUBLIC AMUSEMENTS.

GAIETY THEATRE.

So successful was the visit last week of the spectacular play, "The Birth of a Nation," to the Gaiety Theatre that it has been decided to extend it for a second week. The usual performances at 2.30 and 8 p.m. will be continued. The appreciative manner in which the play was received last evening showed that the public continues to recognise its undoubted merits. These pictures, which are far beyond anything hitherto shown by the medium of the cinematograph, can be seen frequently without losing their interest. The thrilling scenes, such as those depicting the battle of Petersburg, and the assassination of Lincoln, were witnessed with keen attention. Every detail could be clearly distinguished, and there was no annoying flickering of the films and unsteadiness of focus, which often spoil attractive cinema performances. Those who have not yet seen this wonderful spectacle should not let the week slip by without visiting the Gaiety Theatre.

THEATRE ROYAL HIPPODROME.

A musical comedy in tabloid form, bearing the inappropriate title of "Wedding Bell(e)s" was produced at the Hippodrome last night. It should be called "The Ananias Family," as one "story" succeeds the other with so much rapidity that before the second scene is finished the persons concerned are all in a state of uncertainty as to their identity. Then a lot of unravelling goes on until the stage manager whispers "Time's up"; the last knot is hurriedly undone, and the curtain falls on as merry a piece of farce as one could wish to see. The acting throughout is exceptionally good. Miss Susie Belmore won general admiration for her charming presentation of Madge, the bride. She has some pretty songs, which she sings admirably. Mr. Frank Melville-Birley, as the bridegroom, is a good second, while Mr. Gilbert Payne's funniosities in the part of Nathaniel, and his singing of "You can't get away from the fact," keep the audience in the best of humour. Mr. James Daly makes his part of the Colonel as natural as farcical comedy permits, and contributes not a little to the success of the piece. Other parts are creditably filled by Mr. Fred Fulton, Mr. H. Rose, Miss Marjorie, and Miss Errol, while the chorus is well-voiced and graceful in action. The music, by Mr. Gilbert Payne, was much admired for its tunefulness. Mr. Hal Parker conducted. The "piece" is preceded by several variety "turns." Winnie Wayne tells stories in song, and tells them well. The Adams, two youthful artists, perform a number of clever tricks on bicycles; and Macdonagh and Russell highly amuse the audience with their domestic affairs. Some topical bioscope pictures complete the bill.

ABBEY THEATRE.

It looks as if the management of the Abbey Theatre has done an excellent stroke of business in beginning the season with "John Bull's Other Island," which was staged last evening before a full house. A very encouraging start has been made, since the company creates a good impression, which is likely to be maintained to the end. Bernard Shaw's satirical comedy has already been favourably received at another theatre in Dublin. The more often it is heard, the more its wit and humour are appreciated. It is not necessary now to say what the play is. It has established its place firmly in the front rank of comedy. The audience last evening followed with attention the brilliant dialogue in the first act between Broadbent, the Englishman, and Larry Doyle, the Irishman, his partner in the engineering business. It is when Broadbent comes to Ireland and meets Nora Reilly that the romance manifests itself. The rigid Englishman loses his head and heart in the presence of Nora, and that winsome Irish maiden is charmingly represented by Miss Irene Kelly. Miss Kelly has played in amateur companies in Dublin, and has had considerable experience on the London stage, but this is a character quite new to her. She has done, and will do, exceedingly well, for she possesses style and grace that can hardly fail to carry her a long way. In the character of Broadbent, Mr. J. M. Kerrigan has a part that suits him admirably. Mr. Louis O'Connor was quite at home as Larry Doyle, and Mr. H. G. Condron was successful in the part of Tim Haffigan. Mr. Fred O'Donovan's assumption of "Father Keegan," the "deprived" priest, and his imaginary conversation with the grasshopper was in perfect order. The company had a good reception all round.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.

A large audience at the Queen's Theatre last evening accorded a hearty welcome to that evergreen favourite, "Arrah-na-Pogue." Mr. P. J. Bourke's company gave an acceptable rendering of the play. It was admirably staged, and the scenery was artistic. The scene representing a well-known glen in the County Wicklow is a fine setting. Mr. Bourke gave effective portraiture to the gallant soldier, "The O'Grady," and "Shaun the Post" was represented by Mr. Frank Delany. Miss Kitty Carrickford, in the part of "Arrah," was most successful. The other characters were competently filled.

EMPIRE THEATRE.

"Step This Way" is not suggestive of music. It rather brings to mind a great emporium where art is subordinate to business. But when you "Step This Way" in Wallingford's Stores, and into the piano department, you hear music to your heart's content, not the slightest hint of commerce. Nobody is in the least anxious to sell a piano, although there are several good ones; everybody is much too busy singing and playing to bother about serious affairs. It is, indeed, a fine gathering of musicians. It is not a question of music now and then, but of music all the time. At the beginning, when Wallingford (Elven Edges) utters his request of "Step This Way," the Hon. G. P. Washington (Billy Leonard) and the ladies of the chorus come upon the stage from the auditorium. Then the music begins. Thereafter are songs and dances and playing of instruments, and the accompaniment of the orchestra, under the direction of Alf. Leonard. This gentleman afterwards leaves his baton aside for a time to play the violin, and he does so to the audience's marked pleasure. His brother, too, appeals to a sweet ear more than once. On one occasion Joe Wilson, as O. Roatsmith, arouses local feeling well. Pleasing singing is also heard when Reginald Wilson impersonates Derusko, the tenor. Of the ladies, first comes Dorothy Vaughan, who is Suzanne, the Girl in the Taxi; Phillis Rare is Ivy Howard; Mrs. Washington, Peggy Hope; the Countess of Chili, Marie Montague; while "the celebrated Welsh harpist" is rendered by Bryant. To each and all is due the success of "Step This Way." Two other turns are those of Pym and Ruby Hughes, lively entertainers; and Irene Dene, a cheering singer, who gracefully leads the audience to join in the chorus of an illustrated song.

TIVOLI THEATRE.

Garadini has both musical and histrionic ability. He is master of several instruments and master of his appearance as well. Within a couple of minutes he passes from the guise of the Abbé Liszt to that of the debonair Maurice Farkoa; from playing inspired music to singing a song about a gay Parisienne. Thus quickly, too, he assumes the aspect of a Pierrot fiddler, a street player, a Scottish shepherd, the skirl of whose pibroch resounds through the theatre. He is truly skilled in the Protean art, and has no small measure of fame. Musicians of another kind are the Brooklyn Comedy Four. Their extravagant costumes are unchanged throughout. After a little preliminary foolery, they settle down to music, and the Brooklyn Comedy Four can sing, though, at first, you might not think it. One of their songs was written in America. Entitled "You don't miss your home," it has a simple swing, which will likely gain it vogue. As sung by a couple of the Four, it will be remembered by those who have travelled far as well as those who are themselves at home. Mr. Charles Robinson is quite at home in Dublin. He was warmly greeted last evening, and as warmly applauded at the end of his performance. This consists of songs which are really comic, of stories which are really funny, so that Mr. Robinson is a genuine comedian. The other artistes of the entertainment are—Florence Kendall, who sings musically; Eddie and Eva, in song and story; Arthur Verno, a comedian who has a voice; Les Alotos, equilibrists; and The Lawries, amusing singers, one of whom gives burlesque interpretations of "Tipperary."

Rathmines Town Hall.—The first Triangle Keystone play presented in Ireland—"Peggy," a five-part exclusive, featuring the renowned Irish-American actress, Miss Billy Burke—is being presented this week at the Town Hall, Rathmines. The production is a marvel of photography, and is worth seeing for that element alone in its presentation, but possesses a greatly enhanced attraction in the fact that the heroine is one of the most fascinating personalities on the stage. Miss Billy Burke impersonates a gay, sweet-hearted American society girl, who comes to live with her uncle in a little Scottish village, and upsets the village apple cart as a natural consequence to her advent amongst the villagers. The programme also includes the Pathé Gazette, the latest war news, and topical events of the hour, as well as several fine comedies, including "The Bright Lights," starring the famous "Fatty" and Mabel in a two-part exclusive Triangle-Keystone film. The orchestral music is now all that could be desired, and to-day Signor Simonetti, the celebrated violinist, will render several solos. It should be noted that the proprietors of the Rathmines Town Hall Cinema pay the tax for their patrons.

Princess Cinema, Rathmines.—The management of the Princess Cinema, Rathmines, presented their patrons with an exceptionally attractive bill of fare yesterday. "Jane Shore" is one of the most fascinating characters in English history, and the five-part exclusive drama in which she figures at the Princess Cinema does ample justice to her touching story. The heroine of "The War of the Roses" carries with her the sympathies of her audience through five stirring acts, abounding in incidents of love and war. The programme also includes a two-part exclusive comedy, featuring Charlie Chaplin in "His Prehistoric Past." A special local attraction is produced by a film showing the sports of the 4th Battalion Royal Irish Fusiliers, in which all the incidents of the day at the Leinster Cricket Ground are embodied. There is also a very interesting war film and the latest Pathé Gazette. On Thursday there will be a complete change of programme, with Alfred Sutro's play, "John Glayde's Honour," starring Sir George Alexander, at the top of the bill.

The Carlton Cinema.—"The Eternal Grind"—the latest success of Miss Mary Pickford—constitutes the chief attraction at the Carlton Cinema for the opening half of the present week. The drama, which is in four parts, abounds in human interest, and should prove the greatest amongst the many marked successes scored by the Pickford dramas. The highly interesting "Dr. Dorsey Expedition Pictures," which are being shown exclusively at the Carlton, continue to be an entertaining and instructive feature of the programme. The comedy element is sustained by an excellent two-part Keystone film, "No One to Guide Him," starring Syd. Chaplin in the principal part. The Topical Budget embraces all the latest war and general news. The orchestral selections are of the usual high-class order, and Mr. E. Goldwater's violin solo, "Souvenir de Moscow," was very cordially received yesterday. On Thursday next the chief pictorial attraction will be Mr. Cyril Maude in "The Greater Will."

Bohemian Picture Theatre.—A first-class drama and comedy programme is being screened for the entertainment of the many patrons of the Bohemian Picture Theatre, Phibsborough, for the opening half of the present week. At the head of the bill is an attraction—which will be continued throughout the week—in the form of a four-act film adaptation of Sir Rider Haggard's celebrated novel "Jess." It is not necessary to remind the many readers of Rider Haggard that the scene of the story is laid in South Africa. The story is one of a retired British officer who went to South Africa to learn farming, and in South Africa two English girls, sisters, had the misfortune to fall in love with him. The tale is a dramatic one, and does not stop short at murder, the film adaptation being of a most fascinating character throughout. In addition, there are a number of exclusive Triangle Keystone comedy films, including "Better Late Than Never," in which artists, beautiful girls, irate fathers, and rivals give rise to many mirth-provoking complications. The Pathé Gazette and Cinema Stop Press screen all the latest war and general news, whilst the orchestral music is up to the established reputation of the house, Signor Simonetti and Mr. Clyde Twelvetrees playing violin and 'cello solos on alternate days. "Jess" will be presented throughout the entire week, with a change in the comedy films. From Thursday next there will be a complete change in the comedy features.

MAGISTRATES' COURTS OR COURTSMARTIAL?

AUTHORITIES CONSIDERING CHANGE OF PROCEDURE.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

DUNGANNON, MONDAY.

During the hearing of a charge under the Defence of the Realm Act at Dungannon (Co. Tyrone) to-day, when John Meenagh, Linfield street, Dungannon, was fined 10s. and costs for making use of statements likely to prejudice recruiting, Captain Whitfield, of the Intelligence Office, Belfast, stated he had been ordered by the military authorities to be present at the hearing. He wished to point out that the authorities took a very serious view of cases such as the present one, and were considering whether the present method of directing such charges to be brought before local justices should not be changed permanently to courtsmartial.

MONDAY NIGHT.

Municipal Conference.—The annual conference of the Association of Municipal Authorities in Ireland will be held to-morrow in the City Hall, Belfast. The Lord Lieutenant, who will attend the Conference, will arrive in Belfast from Dublin at 11.45 a.m., accompanied by Sir George Prescott, Bart., Military Secretary. Lord Wimborne will be received by the Lord Mayor (Sir Crawford M'Cullagh) and the City Chamberlain (Mr. F. W. Moneypenny, M.V.O.), and will drive to the City Hall. At 1.30 the Conference will adjourn, and the Lord Mayor will entertain the Lord Lieutenant and the delegates to luncheon. After luncheon the Conference will resume, and the Lord Lieutenant will deliver an address. His Excellency will be the guest of the Lord Mayor during his visit.

Baths and Mixed Bathing.—The dispute between the Belfast Corporation and the local swimming clubs regarding the increase in the price of admission to swimming baths still continues. The clubs, by the recent action of the Corporation, have been deprived of their special facilities, and their members are compelled to pay the same price for admission as the general public. A suggestion is made to introduce mixed bathing in the baths, and it is pointed out that this would in all probability turn the baths into profit-making undertakings. Many English cities, including London, Liverpool, Manchester, Blackpool, St. Anne's, and Hyde have introduced mixed bathing with satisfactory results. The Bangor Urban Council this year permitted mixed bathing at the Pickie, and the number of bathers increased by 5,369 over the previous season. Similar results, it is believed, would follow the introduction of mixed bathing in the Belfast baths, and remove the financial loss which the baths at present involve.

DEPARTMENTAL PROSECUTION IN LONDONDERRY.

SOLICITOR AND THE RESIDENT MAGISTRATE.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDONDERRY, MONDAY.

At the Londonderry Petty Sessions to-day the Department of Agriculture summoned a cattle-drover named John Meenan, 9 Lecky road, Londonderry, for driving through the city sheep suffering from scab.

The case for the complainants was that on 29th July 43 sheep were consigned by Charles Moore, Kesh, to the defendant at Londonderry, and the portal veterinary inspector found 16 of them suffering from acute scab, of some weeks' standing. The defence was that Meenan was merely employed for the purpose of driving sheep from one station to another, and that he received with the sheep a certificate signed by the sergeant of the police showing that the sheep had been dipped.

The magistrates decided to adjourn the case for a week, and Mr. Hardy, R.M., directed the District Inspector to make investigations regarding the certificate.

Mr. Humphrey Babington, solicitor for the defendant, took possession of the certificate, and refused to hand it up.

Mr. Hardy said it had been put in evidence and impounded by the Court. He had never seen a professional gentleman take up an attitude in Court like that of Mr. Babington.

Mr. Babington said the document was in his possession. He would stand up for his own rights. If the District Inspector wanted to see the document it was open for him to see it at his office.

Mr. Hardy, R.M.—If you here deliberately, as a professional gentleman, take the line you have, I merely point out that it is a very serious matter, and you take the document at your peril.

Mr. Babington—I will have to take the risk of it.

Mr. Hardy, R.M.—We have been very considerably influenced in our decision by the document, and you take it out of our jurisdiction. We want to know if the document is of any value or not, and you take it from our control, and possibly defeat the ends of justice.

Mr. Babington—It is in my custody, and will be in my office till the case is finished. The Crown can have access to it any time.

Mr. Hardy—I have never seen a line adopted like that of Mr. Babington. It may turn out a very serious matter, and it is most essential the case should be sifted.

The case was adjourned, Mr. Babington retaining possession of the document.

The Allies and Greece.

The situation in Greece has come at last to a head. An Athens message announces that M. Venezelos, accompanied by a number of high naval and military officers and other supporters, left the Greek capital early yesterday morning. He is believed to have gone to Crete, and he may go thence to Salonika. The significance of this step by M. Venezelos is unmistakable. It means that he has ceased to hope for anything from King Constantine. He has made up his mind to lead the revolutionary movement that aims at saving for Greece what can still be saved from the ruin in which the alien and unpatriotic policy of her Sovereign has involved her. M. Venezelos's action gives us the measure of the depths of treachery to the Allies and to the first interests of his own country which King Constantine has plumbed. Through all his public life M. Venezelos has been, before all else, a loyal and devoted servant of the Crown. He it was who rescued the late King George from the toils of the military conspiracy which had all but overthrown the Monarchy. During the series of crises which have followed upon his dismissal by King Constantine a year ago he has made it the touch-stone of his policy to avoid anything which might be subversive of the monarchical principle or detrimental to the Crown in the person of the present King. If he has now decided to take up an attitude of open hostility to the King, that decision can only be inspired by a conviction that not otherwise can Greece be saved from disaster. That his departure from Athens, in the circumstances which surround that departure, is tantamount to a declaration of war against King Constantine goes without saying. M. Venezelos is bound, in the first place, for Crete; and that island, of which he is a native, is now under the absolute control of insurgent forces. The insurrectionary movement, which had already spread over almost the whole of the mainland of New Greece, extended to Crete towards the end of last week, and yesterday news reached Athens of its complete and almost bloodless success. His visit to the island in this situation is enough, apart from his intention of going later to Salonika, to identify M. Venezelos with the popular rebellion against King Constantine.

His action removes the last elements of doubt in the Greek situation. Even without this final proof there was already ample evidence that King Constantine is in league with those enemies of the Entente Powers who are also the natural enemies of his own country. The British correspondents at Athens who are able to despatch uncensored messages are united in their opinion that the "firm" Greek Note to Germany in connection with the kidnapping of the Kavalla garrison and the reported decision upon "departure from neutrality in principle" are mere play-acting. The Greek Court apparently believes that impudent insincerity can be pressed to any point against the complaisant Allies. In essentials, however, its attitude is unchanged. General Dusmanis, the notoriously pro-German Chief of the General Staff, was relieved of his office several weeks ago; but he is still to be found at the almost nightly conferences, attended by the German Minister and the First Secretary of the German Legation, which are held at the King's Palace of Tatoi in Thessaly. Trenches have been dug around the Palace. In its neighbourhood have been mustered the men hitherto exempt from military service who have suddenly been called up—and called up, it is significant to note, only in Old Greece, not in New Greece, where the revolutionary movement is powerful. In this district of Thessaly, moreover, orders have been given for the accumulation of a quantity of rolling stock. These proceedings on the part of the King follow his action in dismissing M. Zaimis, an honest and self-respecting man, and replacing him as Premier by his creature, M. Kalogeropoulos, an avowed pro-German. The action of M. Venezelos in identifying himself with the revolutionary movement provides the Allies with their opportunity. They may have been reluctant hitherto to proceed to extremes lest they should provoke a reaction in favour of the King. The adherence of M. Venezelos to the widespread insurrection affords a guarantee that their official support of it would produce nothing but unbounded satisfaction among that large majority of the Greek people which has not sold its soul. The Court faction could not long withstand the power of the Allies, backed by the approval and aid of all that is worthy in Greece.

Even if war with official Greece, as represented by King Constantine and his Government, were attended by some risk, that risk must be preferred to a continuance of the present situation. It is an obligation of the greater Allies to their new Ally, Rumania, that the situation in Greece should be cleared up without further delay. King Constantine, a well-informed correspondent at Athens declares, aims chiefly at keeping it in suspense for another month, in the hope that by that time Rumania will have been crushed. We may be confident that he will be disappointed; but, if his hope were realised, he would have contributed largely to its realisation by depriving General Sarrail of full freedom to exert the power of the large army under his command in Macedonia. Rumania has suffered from the restraint which the collusion of the Greek Government with the enemy has imposed upon General Sarrail's action. That restraint allowed Bulgaria to strike heavily at Rumania from the south in the Dobrudja at a time when she had committed the bulk of her strength to the campaign in Transylvania across her western frontier. Though Marshal von Mackensen's stroke has failed, its delivery has considerably disturbed the Rumanian plan of campaign. It put Rumania under the necessity of transferring large forces from Transylvania to the Dobrudja, and, in the course of restoring the equilibrium on the latter front, of impairing it to some extent on the former. While Rumanian forces were being concentrated in the Dobrudja, the advance in Transylvania had to be arrested. The forces disposed for that advance, in fact, had to be so far reduced as to provide the Austro-Germans with an opportunity of attacking in the Vulcan Pass, the most southerly of the passes through the Transylvanian Alps. The equilibrium is now restored on both fronts, and in Transylvania, as well as in the Dobrudja with the assistance of the Russians, the Rumanians are gradually regaining the upper hand. A vigorous advance by General Sarrail in Macedonia would decide the whole Balkan campaign. He must, at all costs, be freed for that advance by the removal of the sinister influences which hamper his movements from Athens.

Dublin Markets.

The war has not done much for agriculture in Ireland. The great majority of our farmers still fails to look beyond the abnormal and temporary profits of the cattle trade. In one direction, however—that of market-gardening—the war has been a definite stimulus. The movement for the cultivation of vacant plots in towns has made a good start in Belfast and Dublin. A women's school for market-gardening has been established in Dublin. It provides an occupation for women which is healthy, congenial, and, if certain obstacles can be overcome, may be made very profitable. In all great cities there is a large and constant demand for fruit and vegetables, and in nearly all great cities except Dublin there is a large demand for flowers. Fruit and vegetables are much dearer in Dublin than in London, and only the well-to-do classes in Dublin can afford the daily luxury of a handful of flowers. If all the idle land round Dublin were cultivated intensively, it would produce enormous quantities of fruit, vegetables, and flowers, would give employment to hundreds of men and women, and would increase the comfort and pleasure of life for a great urban population. A beginning is now being made with this admirable experiment, and to the casual observer its success seems to be assured. A largely increased supply of fruit and vegetables ought to bring the present high prices down with a run, and to create a huge and permanent market. There is one great difficulty, however, and the current issue of the Irish Homestead does a real service to intending cultivators by giving them an emphatic warning about it. The Dublin market "rings" are nowhere more formidable or exacting than in the department of fruit and vegetables. They buy the produce from the grower at rates which hardly repay his skill and labour: he is compelled to accept those rates because no other local market is open to him. By the time when the produce reaches the consumer its price has reached the scale with which we are so painfully familiar. A correspondent of the Homestead says that beans sold in the Dublin market at 1s. 1d. per half bushel of 20 lbs. have been sold afterwards to the public at 3d. to 4d. per lb., and that salad sold for 2d. per dozen in the market is sold at one penny per head in the shops. These cases, if true, may be exceptional, but it is a fact beyond doubt that, as a general result of the system of rings in the Dublin markets, the producer is confined to a limited and wholly artificial market. The consumer must pay up to the standard which the ring chooses to set, or, in the case of fruit and vegetables, he must deprive his family and himself of two of the chief necessaries of life. So long as the rings control the market the widest development of intensive culture around Dublin will not make it really profitable for the cultivator and will not lighten the demand on the consumer's pocket. It is clear that, if the new movement is to succeed, direct contact must be established between producer and consumer. The Homestead recommends the system of weekly supplies to private customers, which prevails largely in London. The market-gardeners in County Dublin could get into touch with a very large clientèle by means of judicious advertisement, and could deliver their produce daily at their customers' doors. Two or three gardeners on a small scale could combine to purchase a horse and cart for this purpose. We agree that, if the movement to promote intensive culture is to be successful in Dublin, the whole question of marketing must be tackled at the very outset. It is not a question of seeking to deprive retailers of their fair profits, but of breaking the burdensome monopoly of rings.

American Plays.

The death of the man who wrote the libretto of "The Belle of New York" is announced. He contrived that popular piece only as a pot-boiler: his ambition was to take rank among the serious dramatists of the day. The manuscripts of his serious dramas went the round of the managers and came back to him. The pot-boiler went round the world as a great theatrical success. It was the first of a series of pieces which were imported from America at a time when English theatrical managers said that they could not get the right sort of thing from English dramatists. The "American invasion" has lost its terrors for British playwrights now. The average quality of American work is no higher than the average of home-produced work. Of course, within certain limits, an English manager incurs less risk in producing a play which has been a proved success in America than in giving a trial to a wholly new work by a British playwright, and for that reason alone American plays will always henceforth have a place in the list of English theatrical productions. Nothing that has come from America is better in substance, however, than the English plays which have had an equal measure of success. A few years ago English melodrama was too crude for a large body of playgoers. The American society melodrama was just the thing for people who are superior to the appeal of crude melodrama. The author of "The Belle of New York" himself produced a good example of the class of play to which we refer—"Leah Kleschna," to which he attached his own name, C. M. S. McLellan. "The Belle of New York" (to which he attached a nom-de-plume) has had a strong influence on the English form of musical comedy. Constructed at first chiefly on French models, English musical comedy was soon Americanised. Bustle and bang became its essentials. The newer revue has gone through the same process. It was derived from the French form, but it quickly approximated to the class of entertainment which was established in favour by the success of "The Belle of New York."

VISITORS AT THE FOREIGN OFFICE.

The Russian and French Ambassadors, and the Liberian and Chilian Ministers, visited the Foreign Office yesterday afternoon, and saw the Departmental officials. Both Viscount Grey and Lord Hardinge were attending the meeting of the War Committee.

THE WAR COMMITTEE.

The War Committee of the Cabinet met in council at 10 Downing street yesterday afternoon.

LORD DERBY AND THE TRANSPORT WORKERS.

Mr. Robert Williams, Secretary of the National Transport Workers' Federation, has received a letter from Lord Derby on the subject of the requisitioning of transport workers by the military authorities. His lordship says—"Port labour committees have been set up in all the chief ports, and I am glad to hear that you think the system generally is working satisfactorily. In those cases where there is not a port committee, the transport workers are in certified occupation. The last thing the War Office desires is to take away necessary men from amongst port transport workers, as the importance of maintaining an adequate supply of dock labour concerns us so closely."

SAD FERRYBOAT ACCIDENT.

Exciting scenes were described yesterday at an inquest on two boys drowned in a ferry boat at Washingborough, near Lincoln. Between thirty and forty people rushed on the boat, and, though the ferryman appealed to some to get off, the majority refused. The boat was pushed off from the bank by someone, and the laughing crowd sang as the boat swayed. It turned turtle, and in a moment all were struggling in the water. Two boys named Ernest Robinson and George Melson were drowned. Two well known Lincoln solicitors named Ernest Burton and Baynard Page, the latter the Chairman in the Munition Court, waded in to the neck, helping in the rescue work.

PRICE OF FLOUR.

The London Flour Millers' Association yesterday left the price of town households unchanged at 55s.

OBITUARY.

THE EARL OF ESSEX.

The Earl of Essex died suddenly at Newmarket yesterday in his 59th year. The late Earl was twice married, and is succeeded by Viscount Malden, the eldest son by the first marriage. The deceased had seen military service in the South African war in 1900. He was formerly a Lieutenant in the Grenadier Guards, Vice-Lieutenant for Herts, and Vice-Chairman of the Herts Territorial Force Association. His figure was well known on the Turf, under both rules, but he showed a decided predilection for National Hunt racing. He was a member of the National Hunt Committee for several years, and only in the spring of this year he was elected a Steward of that body.

MR. WILLIAM EVELYN DENISON.

Intelligence has been received in Nottingham of the death on Sunday of Mr. William Evelyn Denison, of Ossington Hall, Newark, who for several years represented the city in Parliament, being returned in 1874, when there were four Liberal opponents, including the late Mr. Henry Labouchere. Mr. Denison was widely known as a member of the Committee and past President of the M.C.C., taking a special interest in the welfare of professionals as President of the Cricketers' Fund Friendly Society.

LONDON CORRESPONDENCE.

153 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
MONDAY NIGHT.

The raiding airship that visited the south-eastern district of London on Saturday night appears carefully to have followed the main road from a remote suburb, scattering incendiary and explosive bombs every few hundred yards. Great damage was done to small property in this way, for this main artery of London runs through districts mostly occupied by working people. Tram lines run all the way along this road, and the cars continued running while the raid was in progress. It is not surprising that people are of opinion that the electric flashes from the cars were helpful in guiding the raiders. The Zeppelin crew, however, were not without means of finding out their position. They had extremely bright magnesium shells or a similar method of lighting up the surroundings.

A correspondent of the Evening Standard complains that, while he had the lights out in the munition factory that he controls five seconds after the warning that Zeppelins were about was given, the work on the adjoining railway went on all the time. "Trucks were being shunted, whistles were shrieking, and every now and again the opening of an engine fire-box sent a glare into the sky." It is a very natural complaint, but is, nevertheless, based upon a misapprehension of the facts. During the earlier raids all railway traffic was stopped, and it was a common experience to hear people say to one another: "No 'Zepps' to-night; you can hear the trains running." But, after a time, the authorities came to the conclusion that, in certain eventualities, it would be much more dangerous to have the railway traffic of the country held up for several hours than to run the risk of giving the aerial raiders information as to the whereabouts of the railway lines. Accordingly, they countermanded their first order, and, knowing the eventualities referred to, I think that they were right.

On Sunday there was a rumour that another Zeppelin had been hit over the North Sea, and it seems that the story had truth in it. A telegram from Copenhagen reports that fishermen saw four airships going slowly south-east on Sunday morning. One, which was damaged at the back, was accompanied by destroyers. Probably this was the airship hit by our guns. Berlin admits the loss of two Zeppelins, but says that all the others returned undamaged. The loss of three airships in three weeks is reported by a Swiss correspondent in Germany to have stunned Berlin. It has moved the German public more than any other event for many months.

Excellent as is the "bag" of two airships, it would no doubt have been even larger if there were more aeroplanes available for home defence; for, even if the aviators cannot always emulate Lieutenant Robinson's feat, they are likely, by harrying the invaders, to drive them within range of the anti-aircraft guns below. But the first business of the Munitions Department must be to provide the needs of the armies at the various fronts. There our aeroplanes are doing even more valuable work than bringing down Zeppelin raiders; but the complete domination which they have established over the enemy's air service is only maintained at a heavy cost, as is shown by the brief statement at the end of Sir Douglas Haig's despatches, both on Saturday and Sunday night, that "five of our machines are missing."

The relics of the airship brought down three weeks ago by Lieutenant Robinson, V.C., were shown at a private view to-day in a marquee erected in the grounds of the Honourable Artillery Company. The airship has been reconstructed as far as possible, and on a long table lie the reconstructed engines, with propeller in position, and gear boxes. On other tables the framework is shown, the Mauser rifles of the crew, and many interesting portions of the wreck. Suspended from the roof is the observation car found in East Anglia. This car was smashed flat, but it has been most carefully restored. It is made of aluminium, and looks very delicate. About five thousand feet of cable was found attached to the car, and it is supposed that it could be lowered that distance from the airship, if necessary, to enable its occupant to report to the officer in charge. This car has been lent by the Admiralty. Another exhibit is a couple of switchboards for the control of the dropping of bombs. The exhibition is to be opened to the public to-morrow, and will remain open for a week.

Taken in conjunction with other little items of news from Belgium that have recently been published, the statement that the female relatives of Germans in Belgium have been ordered to leave the country is not without interest. True, it comes from Amsterdam, which is not always a trustworthy source of news; but, on the other hand, it is just the precaution which the Germans would take if they thought it likely that they might be forced to evacuate Belgium in order to shorten their lines.

A curious story of War Office administration as it was before recent reforms is told in the Westminster Gazette. In peace-time ammunition was sent out in strong teak boxes, which were accounted for, returned to store, and used again and again. Nobody changed the specification for war-time. So teak boxes were still ordered, though they had doubled in price; and when they got to the front the soldiers, in want of a little warmth, broke up the boxes for sticks. That had been going on a long time before it occurred to somebody that a white wood box would carry the ammunition just as well, would cost one-sixth the price of teak, and would make better firewood at the other end. Then the white wood box was adopted. But before that era shiploads of firewood had been sent to Gallipoli to keep the men warm in the trenches, and a great saving in transport as well as in money might have been effected had it occurred to somebody that goods that are made for long service in peace are not required of the same quality in the destructive times of war.

The band of the Garde Republicaine will not play in the streets or open spaces while in London, for it is coming over on a visit to the Brigade of Guards, and all the street music necessary will be rendered by the massed bands of the Brigade. When the French band arrives at Charing Cross on Wednesday the massed bands will play "La Marseillaise" as the train comes in, and then play the Frenchmen to the Wellington Barracks. This will give the public a great opportunity of giving a welcome to our French visitors.

British arrangements with Holland are now becoming effective. A number of tubs of a particular cheese much favoured by the Germans is now reaching London. It is not the ordinary round Dutch cheese, red and yellow, but a large rich cheese not unlike Cheshire, which sells at a good price even in Holland. The Germans for years have taken all that they could get of it, but, owing to the arrangement made with the Dutch Cheese Merchants' Union that the Allies should receive one-third of the cheese available for export from Holland, we are likely to get considerable supplies. The Germans will, of course, have to go without.

Among other methods of "combing out" to be adopted by the authorities, there is reason to believe that there will be a re-examination of the medically unfit. The Military Service Act only required men rejected since August 14, 1915, to present themselves again, and it is unlikely that these will be further troubled. In the early days of the war, however, a large proportion of those offering themselves voluntarily were rejected on medical grounds. Many of these men would now pass under the modified standard, and it is they who are likely to be called upon. It is thought that many of them would be available for use in Classes B and C, thus releasing men now serving in those classes.

SOUTH OF IRELAND MAIL SERVICE.

GREAT SOUTHERN COMPANY'S POSITION.

INTERVIEW WITH MR. NEALE.

Much controversy has been provoked and many complaints have been made by business people in the South of Ireland owing to the decision of the Great Southern and Western Railway Company to run the morning mail train from Kingsbridge 55 minutes later than the present hour of departure, 6.40 a.m. In addition to the 25 minutes in accordance with the Uniform Time Act, the company have decided to delay the scheduled time of starting by 30 minutes. The hour of arrival in Cork will, therefore, be 11.30 a.m. instead of 10.35 a.m. as at present. It is pointed out on behalf of business people that English letters will thus not be delivered in Cork until one o'clock, and, as the outgoing post will close at 3.15 p.m., much inconvenience will ensue. The railway company, on the other hand, state that, owing to the continuously late arrival of the mails, when they are handed to them at Amiens street by the Dublin and South-Eastern Company, the altered departure is little more than putting on paper what is actually occurring in practice, but on account of the great increase of mails ought to be within a few minutes of what it is at present. On behalf of the Dublin and South-Eastern Company, it is explained that the company's mail trains are despatched with all speed, but on account of the great increase in mails and other traffic of various descriptions it is not always possible to accomplish the journey between Kingstown Pier and Amiens street in the scheduled time. Such delays, however, it is maintained, rarely, if ever, amount to more than a few minutes. A delay of about a minute and a half is caused by the substitution of the engine of the Great Southern and Western Company for that of the Dublin and South-Eastern. As regards the position of the City of Dublin Steampacket Company, it is stated that they are in no way involved in the matter. Their boats start as soon as the mails are placed on board, and the cross-Channel journey is always made within contract time. The late arrival of the mail train at Holyhead from Euston, due, of course, to war exigencies, delays the departure of the mail packet, but no time is lost; frequently, in fact, time is made up on the journey across.

ARRIVAL OF MAILS.

As the complaints have been made specifically about the late departure of the morning mail from Kingsbridge, a representative of the Irish Times had an interview yesterday with Mr. Neale, general manager of the Great Southern and Western Company, who explained in detail the reasons that led to the company's decision.

"What has led the Company," he stated, "to arrange with the Post Office for the altered running of the down morning mail train is the fact that for years past it has not been able to leave Kingsbridge up to time with the mails. The criticism of the company's action is all based on the assumption that this train now leaves at the scheduled hour, viz.:—6.40 a.m.—and that the mails arrive at their destinations at the times shown in the time-table. As a matter of fact, the train has not been handed over to this company at Amiens street at the scheduled time once within the last twelve months. These delays are not of recent date. On looking up our records for the year 1913 I find that from June to October in 115 working days the train arrived late at Amiens street on 109 occasions, the average late arrival being 16½ minutes. This was before the war, but within the last twelve months the running has become still worse. Take last month, for example. The average late arrival of the train at Amiens street was 36 minutes, and if we omit three occasions on which the train was 88, 63, and 74 minutes late respectively, and the mails had to be forwarded by the train leaving Kingsbridge at 9.15 a.m., the average late arrival was 31 minutes. These figures prove that the delivery of the mails at the different stations must have been on an average about half an hour later than the scheduled time, so that the altered departure from Kingsbridge is little more than putting on paper what is actually occurring in practice, and the public will not really be prejudiced by the change."

Questioned as to how the change will affect the public, Mr. Neale said that the people who object in the Press to the later start of 30 minutes apparently have no consideration for the travelling public. At the present time passengers joining the train at Kingsbridge and at intermediate stations where the mail train stops, and also at stations on the connecting branch lines, are under the necessity of being at their stations at the time-table time, and having to wait for varying periods up to an hour for the arrival of their trains. The services in the opposite direction are also disorganised owing to the tabled crossings on single lines—and nearly all the branch lines are single track—being upset by the late running of the mail connections.

UNNECESSARY WAITS.

"It is unfair," he continued, "to the public that times of departure of trains should be published that we know cannot be adhered to, and which involve long and unnecessary waits at the stations. This is the state of affairs which we are now endeavouring to remedy by putting on paper the actual time that the trains are likely to arrive.

In reply to further questions, Mr. Neale said that from some of the comments which have appeared in the Press one would infer that the company had something to gain by the alteration. This was not so. It was being made with the object of conveniencing the travelling public, while at the same time causing only a very trifling interference with the mails. As a matter of fact, it would necessitate the running of additional trains which the company had proposed to do without during the winter. He had seen in the Press the letters of the City of Dublin Steam Packet and Dublin and South-Eastern Railway Companies to the Cork Chamber of Commerce. There was nothing in those letters which contradicted anything he had stated. The outstanding fact which mattered was the arrival of the train at Amiens street, where it was handed over to his company, and the figures given could not be controverted. The change was only being made for the period of the war; but, as he had told the Cork Chamber of Commerce, if the mails were handed over at Amiens street in better time, the company would be only too glad to alter the train service accordingly.

When questioned as to whether a saving of half an hour could not be effected if the mail train did not come into Kingsbridge, Mr. Neale said that this idea was quite illusory.

SUGGESTED CHANGES.

"To begin with," he said, "we are up against the fact that Carlisle Pier, Kingstown, is not sufficiently long to hold our complete train. Two coaches—one of them the travelling post office—are detached at Kingsbridge nightly because of this, and these coaches have to be attached each morning here on arrival of the train from Kingstown. The Waterford portion of the train is also attached here at Kingsbridge each morning, as it is 'slipped' at Kildare. These portions of the train would have to be sent to Amiens street each morning—which, of course, could be done—but the travelling post office would require to be attached to the front of the train, because of the mail delivery apparatus and the Carlow and Waterford portion in the rear." This would, he explained, involve considerable shunting. On arrival of the train from Kingstown at Amiens street portions of the mails would, as is at present done, have to be transferred from the van in which they were loaded to the travelling post office, and a portion into the Waterford van because of the train not stopping at Kildare. The Dublin newspapers would also have to be loaded at Amiens street, and the Dublin mails and passengers, with their baggage. The shunting, loading, and transferring could not be done under fifteen to twenty minutes, and as a consequence in ordinary times precedence would have to be given to the Great Northern and Midland Great Western Companies, and their portions of the train would be in front from Kingstown, as it would be impossible for them to start their trains to time if they had to wait while all this work was being done. There was also to be taken into account the fact that fewer Dublin people would travel to the South of Ireland by the morning mail if the train left Amiens street without calling at Kingsbridge. Many of them live in the suburbs, and the present departure time is already too early. The Amiens street loop line station is not nearly so convenient as Kingsbridge Station, and it is more difficult of access. Newspapers, luggage, and probably also the mails, would have to be brought up the long inclines from the street level. The change would also involve the running of an additional train each way between Kingsbridge and Amiens street daily, at considerable cost, to convey to Kingsbridge the passengers for stations not served by the mail train. "On the whole," he said, "the utmost saving that we could undertake to make would be, so far as can be judged, about seven minutes, and this difference would not compensate for the inconvenience and expense which the alteration would cause at the Dublin end."

When asked to what he attributed the delays, Mr. Neale said that they were due to war conditions. "I think," he stated, "all the companies are working very well, considering existing circumstances. The public are somewhat unreasonable in expecting the services to go on as usual. When the mail service was first arranged it was purely for passengers and mails, but now the steamers are carrying thousands of newspapers and hundreds of parcels, and the volume of traffic is much greater than it was before the war."

OPERATIONS IN EGYPT.

GALLIPOLI AND SALONIKA.

GENERAL SIR JOHN MURRAY'S DESPATCH.

A supplement to the London Gazette issued yesterday contains a series of despatches and recommendations by General Sir Archibald Murray, Commander-in-Chief of the Egyptian Expeditionary Force. These deal with the operations in Egypt and its neighbourhood from the date on which General Murray assumed command to 31st May, 1916, and incidentally touch on those in Gallipoli and Salonika, for the administrative work in which the Egyptian Command was responsible.

In the first despatch, dated 1st June, 1916, General Murray says:—

On 9th January, 1916, I arrived in Cairo, and, on the following day, took over the command of the Mediterranean Expeditionary Force from General Sir C. C. Monro, G.C.M.G., K.C.B., who had himself arrived from Mudros but a few days before. At that date the Mediterranean Expeditionary Force was in a state of transition as regards its larger component, the Dardanelles Army. On the night of the 8th-9th January this Army had completed its successful evacuation of Cape Helles; its units were still concentrated at Mudros and Imbros, awaiting transport to Egypt, where all the Force, excluding the Salonika Army, had been ordered to concentrate. Meanwhile, a portion of the Force, which had been set free by the earlier evacuation of the Suvla Bay and Anzac positions, had already arrived in Egypt, where it had come under the command of General Sir John Maxwell, K.C.B., K.C.M.G. The concentration of the Australian and New Zealand Army Corps, for instance, was practically complete, and the 53rd Division was occupied in operations on the western frontier of Egypt. General Headquarters of the Mediterranean Expeditionary Force were temporarily established in Cairo. The instructions which I had received from the Secretary of State for War placed under my command all organised formations then in Egypt, or on their way to Egypt, with the exception of such troops as might be considered necessary for the defence of Egypt and the Nile Valley against attack from the west, or for maintaining order in the Nile Valley and the Nile Delta. The function assigned to me was that of protecting Egypt against attack from the east, and the westward limit of my command was roughly fixed by a line running north and south approximately five miles west of the Suez Canal. The British Force at Salonika was also placed under my general supervision. During the period under review, in addition to the extensive military preparations required for the defence of the eastern front, the amount of purely administrative work thrown on all sections of my Staff has been extremely heavy. The exigencies of the Gallipoli campaign had placed the Force under my command in a state of serious disorganisation. Some units were in Egypt, others on the sea, others in Ægean ports. It was not until the end of February that the last units of the Dardanelles Army reached Egypt. Every day for over six weeks ship loads of troops, guns, animals, and transport were arriving at Alexandria and Port Said. The components of this mass had to be disentangled and forwarded to their proper destinations; old units had to be reorganised, new units to be created, brigades, divisions, army corps to be re-formed. The British troops from Gallipoli were incomplete in personnel and material. It was urgently necessary to bring them up to strength, re-equip them, and provide them with train and mechanical transport on a modified scale. The Australasian troops also needed re-equipment, and, in their case, there was the additional problem of dealing with a mass of unabsorbed reinforcements. Further training of officers and men was an urgent necessity. Moreover, the embarkation of troops for service elsewhere began in February, and continued without intermission till the end of April. To this work must be added not only the maintenance of my Force, both in Egypt and Salonika, with animals, supplies, ordnance stores, works material, and medical and veterinary stores, but also the provision and despatch of ordnance stores, works material, and supplies specially demanded for Basrah and East Africa.

Reference is made to the work of training and organisation, and the despatch continues:—

When I arrived in Egypt the intentions of the enemy as regards an attack on the Suez Canal were by no means certain. Though his new means of communication in Southern Syria and Sinai, commenced with this end in view, were still in a backward state, he undoubtedly had at his disposal the troops, amounting to 250,000 men or more, necessary for such an attack. The adequate defence of the Canal was, therefore, a matter of serious importance. The outline of a scheme of defence had already been prepared; certain works were being constructed, railways and pipe-lines and roads commenced, and troops were being concentrated in the three sections of the Canal defences, which were based on Suez, Ismailia, and Port Said respectively. A satisfactory agreement was arrived at between Sir John Maxwell and myself regarding the delimitations of our respective spheres of command and the troops to be allotted to him. On 22nd January General Headquarters opened at Ismailia.

My chief concern was now the defence of the Canal. The work on the stationary defences was backward. Difficulties of water supply on the east bank were increased by shortage of piping; labour troubles had delayed the progress of roads and railways. Guns had still to be emplaced, and no part of the front defence line was actually occupied by troops. Nevertheless, as there were no signs of an imminent advance on the part of the enemy, the question of the stationary defences caused me no serious anxiety, though everything possible was done to hasten on their completion. The organisation of the offensive defence, which time has proved to be paramount, was, however, a pressing matter hitherto untouched. Practically nothing had been done towards the organisation of mobile forces. The collection of a large number of riding and transport camels had to be undertaken at once and a plan of campaign to be devised. Moreover, time was short, for it was plain that any offensive on a large scale by the enemy must be commenced before the middle of March. For the force under my command the only possible line of advance was along the northern line from Qantara towards Qatia and El Arish, and the task was at once taken up of examining the possibilities of an offensive on this line and solving the problem of maintaining a considerable force at Qatia during the summer months. The result of these investigations is to be seen in my memorandum of 15th February addressed to the Chief of the Imperial General Staff, in which I stated that the first step towards securing the true base for the defence of Egypt was an advance to a suitable position east of Qatia and the construction of a railway to that place.

ENEMY FORCES.

Up to the middle of February aeroplane reconnaissance was the only active military operation possible, owing to the need for reorganising the units of the force and for pushing on the work of laying roads, pipe-lines and railways to enable an adequate force to be maintained on, and beyond, the front lines. On February 16th the Russian Army entered Erzerum, inflicting a heavy defeat on the Turkish Army opposed to it. It seemed likely then that all the enemy's schemes for attacking the Canal in force must, for the present, fall to the ground, and such has proved to be the case. The garrisons in Syria were gradually reduced, until it was estimated that not more than 60,000 men were available for an attack on Egypt. At this period, too, a reconnaissance was undertaken from Tor. This post, and that of Abu Zeneima, both on the Sinaitic coast south of Suez, were then garrisoned by a battalion of the Egyptian Army—subsequently by the 14th Sikhs—and had, by arrangement with General Maxwell, come under my direction. The reconnaissance from Tor was undertaken against a concentration of a small body of the enemy at Wadi Giuneh, some miles distant from the coast. This minor operation was in every way successful, though the enemy had fled before their camp was reached, leaving behind their baggage, which was destroyed. The troops then returned without further incident.

From March onwards the rapid embarkation of troops for France depleted my forces considerably. During this month the military operations on the eastern front, if not momentous, were satisfactory. On 6th March a very gallant and successful attack on Hassana was made by the Royal Flying Corps, which resulted in the destruction of the pumping station. Bomb attacks were made on Nekhl and other places in Sinai, and on 24th March Hassana was again attacked in force with bombs. In the northern sector the preliminary steps were being taken for the advance to Qatia. Week by week permanent posts were pushed further ahead, special reconnaissances were made with a view to testing the water supply, and the broad gauge railway from Qantara to Qatia was being carried forward as fast as possible.

On 11th March I received instructions from the late Secretary of State for War that the command of the troops in Egypt was to be reorganised, and that I was appointed General Officer Commanding-in-Chief all the Imperial forces in this country, which added to my original command the command held by General Sir John Maxwell. By this change I not only became responsible for the administration of martial law in Egypt and the maintenance of order throughout the Nile Valley and Delta, but I also succeeded to the direction of the operations against the Senoussi on the Western Frontier, which had very appropriately been brought to a triumphant period by General

FROM "THE TIMES" OF TO-DAY.

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE PROPRIETORS OF THE TIMES.)

THE AIR RAIDS.

The air raids, says The Times, have two ends in view—to do military damage and to strike terror into the civilian population. After some twenty months they have altogether failed in both. "No reports," Lord French states, "of any military damage have been received." So it has been since they began. A very few soldiers have been accidentally killed, but of the 352 victims who have lost their lives, and of the 709 wounded, almost all have been harmless civilians, and very many women or children. The material damage has been done mostly to small houses inhabited by workingmen, and to buildings in nowise adapted for purposes of war. The proportion of it which has injured our military preparations has been simply negligible. The attempt to frighten us has been equally futile. The fall of powerful bombs in a thickly populated district creates alarm for the moment amongst those who witness the horrors which the explosion produces, but it does not shake their determination, and, outside their own immediate neighbourhood it does not inspire even reasonable caution. Excitement and curiosity, as this last instance has again demonstrated, are the predominant feelings these raids arouse at the moment, while they leave behind them a deepened anger and a more resolute will to subdue the authors of these methods of barbarism. Reflecting upon these things, the intelligent German might be tempted to ask whether the raids "pay." However, unless these raids are for military purposes or for frightening us, they may "boom" another patriotic loan and stimulate the reluctant German citizen to loosen his purse strings once again.

IRELAND AND CONSCRIPTION.

Mr. Standish O'Grady writes to The Times from Dublin:—"From a lifelong knowledge of Ireland I believe that the vast majority of young Irishmen would welcome conscription. It would relieve them from two tyrannies—(1) the tyranny of a loud-tongued, overbearing minority, and (2) the coercion of parents, an influence which in Ireland is very strong."

"Irish Catholic," also writing in The Times, says:—"If the Arms Act were introduced, the Irish Constabulary could enforce conscription. The Ulster Volunteers, who set the example of illicit arming, would now, doubtless, set the example of peaceful disarmament, and it is to be hoped that the Redmond and O'Brien Volunteers would follow their example. It would then only remain to deal with the Sinn Fein Volunteers, and they could be easily disarmed by the Constabulary, backed by the military forces now in Ireland. The benefits resulting to Ireland would be enormous. The transforming of the men of military age into loyal, well-disposed citizens would be one of them, and it is to be hoped that the Sinn Feiners now interned in England might be given the option of enlisting. I have hitherto treated the question from an Irish point of view, but the advantage of some 200,000 men of the finest fighting material added to the Imperial forces at this juncture needs no demonstration."

GERMANY IN DEFEAT.

In one of its articles, says The Times, in support of the War Loan, the Cologne Gazette gives a blood-curdling account of the consequences of defeat. It includes the following:—An English bishop proposes a criminal court composed of neutrals—presumably with Herr Wilson as President—and its condemnation would simply be enforced by the armed power of the Entente States. The Entente is at one in the decision not to negotiate either with the Kaiser or Herr von Bethmann Hollweg. Herr Asquith has, himself, officially proclaimed that he will take his vengeance on the Kaiser personally. Almost everywhere one meets the pleasant intention to level Berlin to the ground, to destroy our industrial centres, to burn our warships, but the main thing is to impose upon us a war indemnity. Until payment is made the thumbscrew is to be applied until we are black in the face.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

Business (says The Times) was not so active yesterday, owing to the House having been opened on Saturday, the numbers of bargains recorded being 3,060, as against 3,679 on Monday last week. Consols rose further, and the War Loan was firmer. United States Steel rose to a fresh high level. Munition Shares remained very firm, but Rubber Shares were subjected to profit-taking sales. Spanish Marconi Shares were flat.

GERMAN MONETARY SHORTAGE.

OFFICERS' PAY REDUCED.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAM.)

AMSTERDAM, MONDAY.

The semi-official Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung states that an Imperial order has been published, reducing the extra service pay in the German Army from October 1st. For example, the extra service pay per month of the Minister of War and of Army Commanders will be reduced by a thousand marks each. Similar allowances to officers of other ranks are to be proportionately reduced.

BREAD FAMINE IN VIENNA.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAM.)

ZURICH, SUNDAY.

An official decree published in Vienna forbids hotels and restaurants in Vienna and Lower Austria to supply bread of any description to guests, who must bring their own. Vienna has been suffering from a bread famine for several days. The newspapers attribute it to a blunder of the Administration, coupled with difficulties in transporting grain and flour. The railway service has been greatly dislocated since Rumania's entry into the war.

THE RAID ON ESSEN.

GERMAN ACCOUNT.

(PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.)

AMSTERDAM, MONDAY.

The following is a fuller version of the German account of the air raid on Essen:—The General in command at Münster reports that on Sunday, about three in the afternoon, several airmen appeared over the suburb of Essen. Within a minute several small bombs were dropped in the centre of the town. Most of them caused no damage. Fires did not break out anywhere. Unhappily, several children at play were injured by bombs. After throwing bombs from a very great height, the airmen disappeared in a bank of cloud.

ST. DENYS WESTREM RAID.

(PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.)

AMSTERDAM, MONDAY.

According to a telegram from the frontier to the Telegraaf, seven aeroplanes participated in a raid on the aerodrome at St. Denys Westrem, near Ghent, last Friday. Shortly after noon over forty bombs fell in quick succession on two sheds, three aeroplanes being burned and some forty Germans killed or seriously wounded. All the Allied aeroplanes returned safely.

DUTCH EAST INDIAN REVOLT.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAM.)

AMSTERDAM, MONDAY.

A telegram from Soerabaja to the Handelsblad, dated yesterday, says that according to reports from the district of the Batang Hari, two hundred insurgents, on the 20th, attacked Moeara and burned the Post Office. Bangko is quiet. All attacks in the neighbourhood have been repulsed without loss. Three infantry brigades, under Captain De Greve, and a body of armed police, have arrived at Moeara Tebo.

[OP]ERATIONS IN EGYPT.

GALLIPOLI AND SALONIKA.

[G]ENERAL SIR JOHN [M]URRAY'S DESPATCH.

[Su]pplement to the London Gazette issued [to-d]ay contains a series of despatches and [recom]mendations by General Sir Archibald [Murray], Commander-in-Chief of the Egyptian [Exped]itionary Force. These deal with the [operatio]ns in Egypt and its neighbourhood from [the da]te on which General Murray assumed [comman]d to 31st May, 1916, and incidentally [o]n those in Gallipoli and Salonika, for [the adm]inistrative work in which the Egyptian [comman]d was responsible.

The exigencies of [the G]allipoli campaign had placed the Force [under] my command in a state of serious dis- [organi]sation. Some units were in Egypt, others [at] sea, others in Ægean ports. It was not [until] the end of February that the last units [of the] Dardanelles Army reached Egypt. Every [day f]or over six weeks ship loads of troops, animals, and transport were arriving at [Alexa]ndria and Port Said. The components of [this m]ass had to be disentangled and forwarded [to the]ir proper destinations; old units had to [be re]organised, new units to be created, [brigad]es, divisions, army corps to be re-formed. British troops from Gallipoli were incom- [plete] in personnel and material. It was [urgent]ly necessary to bring them up to strength, [to equ]ip them, and provide them with train [and m]echanical transport on a modified scale. [The A]ustralasian troops also needed re-equip- [ment], and, in their case, there was the addi- [tional] problem of dealing with a mass of un- [train]ed reinforcements. Further training of [officers] and men was an urgent necessity. More- [over, t]he embarkation of troops for service else- [where] began in February, and continued with- [out in]termission till the end of April. To this must be added not only the maintenance [of the] Force, both in Egypt and Salonika, with [store]s, supplies, ordnance stores, works ma- [terial] and medical and veterinary stores, but [also] the provision and despatch of ordnance [stores], works material, and supplies specially [deman]ded for Basrah and East Africa.

[Refe]rence is made to the work of training [and or]ganisation, and the despatch continues:—

[When] I arrived in Egypt the intentions of the [enemy] as regards an attack on the Suez Canal [were] by no means certain. Though his new [lines] of communication in Southern Syria and [Sinai], commenced with this end in view, were [still i]n a backward state, he undoubtedly had [at his] disposal the troops, amounting to 250,000 [men] or more, necessary for such an attack. [The] adequate defence of the Canal was, there- [fore,] a matter of serious importance. The out- [lines] of a scheme of defence had already been [prepa]red; certain works were being constructed, [railw]ays and pipe-lines and roads commenced, [and t]roops were being concentrated in the three [sectio]ns of the Canal defences, which were [based] on Suez, Ismailia, and Port Said respec- [tively]. A satisfactory agreement was arrived [at b]etween Sir John Maxwell and myself re- [gard]ing the delimitations of our respective [sphere]s of command and the troops to be al- [lotted] to him. On 22nd January General Head- [quart]ers opened at Ismailia.

[My] chief concern was now the defence of the [Cana]l. The work on the stationary defences [was] backward. Difficulties of water supply on [the] east bank were increased by shortage [of] piping; labour troubles had delayed [the] progress of roads and railways. Guns [were] still to be emplaced, and no part of the [new] defence line was actually occupied by [troop]s. Nevertheless, as there were no signs of [an im]minent advance on the part of the enemy, [the] question of the stationary defences caused [me n]o serious anxiety, though everything pos- [sible] was done to hasten on their completion. [The] organisation of the offensive defence, which has proved to be paramount, was, how- [ever,] a pressing matter hitherto untouched. [Pract]ically nothing had been done towards the [organ]isation of mobile forces. The collection of [a lar]g[e] number of riding and transport camels [had t]o be undertaken at once and a plan of [camp]aign to be devised. Moreover, time was [short], for it was plain that any offensive on a [large] scale by the enemy must be commenced [before] the middle of March. For the force [under] my command the only possible line of [advan]ce was along the northern line from [Kanta]ra towards Qatia and El Arish, and the [work] was at once taken up of examining the [possib]ilities of an offensive on this line and [of] the problem of maintaining a consider- [able] force at Qatia during the summer months. [The r]esult of these investigations is to be seen [in m]y memorandum of 15th February ad- [dresse]d to the Chief of the Imperial General [Staff], in which I stated that the first step [towar]ds securing the true base for the defence [of Eg]ypt was an advance to a suitable position [east o]f Qatia and the construction of a railway [to th]at place.

ENEMY FORCES.

[Up] to the middle of February aeroplane re- [conna]issance was the only active military opera- [tion] possible, owing to the need for reorganis- [ing th]e units of the force and for pushing on [the w]ork of laying roads, pipe-lines and rail- [ways] to enable an adequate force to be main- [taine]d on, and beyond, the front lines. On [Febru]ary 16th the Russian Army entered [Erzeru]m, inflicting a heavy defeat on the [Turkis]h Army opposed to it. It seemed likely [t]hat all the enemy's schemes for attacking [the C]anal in force must, for the present, fall [to the] ground, and such has proved to be the [case]. The garrisons in Syria were gradually [reduce]d, until it was estimated that not more [than 6]0,000 men were available for an attack [on Eg]ypt. At this period, too, a reconnaissance [was u]ndertaken from Tor. This post, and that [of Ab]u Zeneima, both on the Sinaitic coast [of the Gulf] of Suez, were then garrisoned by a [detachme]nt of the Egyptian Army—subsequently [by the] 14th Sikhs—and had, by arrangement [with] General Maxwell, come under my direc- [tion]. The reconnaissance from Tor was under- [taken] against a concentration of a small body [of the] enemy at Wadi Ginneh, some miles dis- [tant f]rom the coast. This minor operation was [ve]ry successful, though the enemy had [fled b]efore their camp was reached, leaving be- [hind t]heir baggage, which was destroyed. The [force] then returned without further incident. [From] March onwards the rapid embarkation [of tro]ops for France depleted my forces con- [sidera]bly. During this month the military [operat]ions on the eastern front, if not momen- [tous], were satisfactory. On 6th March a very [brigh]t and successful attack on Hassana was [made] by the Royal Flying Corps, which re- [sulted] in the destruction of the pumping [statio]n. Bomb attacks were made on Nekhl [and] other places in Sinai, and on 24th March [Hassa]na was again attacked in force with [bomb]s. In the northern sector the preliminary [steps] were being taken for the advance to [Qatia]. Week by week permanent posts were [pushe]d further ahead, special reconnaissances [were] made with a view to testing the water [suppl]y, and the broad gauge railway from [Kanta]ra to Qatia was being carried forward as [fast a]s possible.

[On] 11th March I received instructions from [the] State Secretary of State for War that the [comm]and of the troops in Egypt was to be re- [organ]ised, and that I was appointed General [Office]r Commanding-in-Chief all the Imperial [troops] in this country, which added to my [origina]l command the command held by General [Sir Jo]hn Maxwell. By this change I not only [becam]e responsible for the administration of [marti]al law in Egypt and the maintenance of [order] throughout the Nile Valley and Delta, [but] also succeeded to the direction of the [opera]tions against the Senoussi on the Western [Fron]tier, which had very appropriately been [broug]ht to a triumphant period by General

THE AIR RAIDS.

The air raids, says The Times, have two ends in view—to do military damage and to strike terror into the civilian population. After some twenty months they have altogether failed in both. "No reports," Lord French states, "of any military damage have been received." So it has been since they began. A very few soldiers have been accidentally killed, but of the 352 victims who have lost their lives, and of the 799 wounded, almost all have been harmless civilians, and very many women or children. The material damage has been done mostly to small houses inhabited by workingmen, and to buildings in nowise adapted for purposes of war. The proportion of it which has injured our military preparations has been simply negligible. The attempt to frighten us has been equally futile. The fall of powerful bombs in a thickly populated district creates alarm for the moment amongst those who witness the horrors which the explosion produces, but it does not shake their determination, and, outside their own immediate neighbourhood it does not inspire even reasonable caution. Excitement and curiosity, as this last instance has again demonstrated, are the predominant feelings these raids arouse at the moment, while they leave behind them a deepened anger and a more resolute will to subdue the authors of these methods of barbarism. Reflecting upon these things, the intelligent German might be tempted to ask whether the raids "pay." However, unless these raids are for military purposes or for frightening us, they may "boom" another patriotic loan and stimulate the reluctant German citizen to loosen his purse strings once again.

IRELAND AND CONSCRIPTION.

Mr. Standish O'Grady writes to The Times from Dublin:—"From a lifelong knowledge of Ireland I believe that the vast majority of young Irishmen would welcome conscription. It would relieve them from two tyrannies—(1) the tyranny of a loud-tongued, overbearing minority, and (2) the coercion of parents, an influence which in Ireland is very strong."

"Irish Catholic," also writing in The Times, says:—"If the Arms Act were introduced, the Irish Constabulary could enforce conscription. The Ulster Volunteers, who set the example of illicit arming, would now, doubtless, set the example of peaceful disarmament, and it is to be hoped that the Redmond and O'Brien Volunteers would follow their example. It would then only remain to deal with the Sinn Fein Volunteers, and they could be easily disarmed by the Constabulary, backed by the military forces now in Ireland. The benefits resulting to Ireland would be enormous. The transforming of the men of military age into loyal, well-disposed citizens would be one of them, and it is to be hoped that the Sinn Feiners now interned in England might be given the option of enlisting. I have hitherto treated the question from an Irish point of view, but the advantage of some 200,000 men of the finest fighting material added to the Imperial forces at this juncture needs no demonstration."

GERMANY IN DEFEAT.

In one of its articles, says The Times, in support of the War Loan, the Cologne Gazette gives a blood-curdling account of the consequences of defeat. It includes the following:—An English bishop proposes a criminal court composed of neutrals—presumably with Herr Wilson as President—and its condemnation would simply be enforced by the armed power of the Entente States. The Entente is at one in the decision not to negotiate either with the Kaiser or Herr von Bethmann Hollweg. Herr Asquith has, himself, officially proclaimed that he will take his vengeance on the Kaiser personally. Almost everywhere one meets the pleasant intention to level Berlin to the ground, to destroy our industrial centres, to burn our warships, but the main thing is to impose upon us a war indemnity. Until payment is made the thumbscrew is to be applied until we are black in the face.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

Business (says The Times) was not so active yesterday, owing to the House having been opened on Saturday, the numbers of bargains recorded being 3,060, as against 3,870 on Monday last week. Consols rose further, and the War Loan was firmer. United States Steel rose to a fresh high level. Munition Shares remained very firm, but Rubber Shares were subjected to profit-taking sales. Spanish Marconi Shares were flat.

GERMAN MONETARY SHORTAGE.

OFFICERS' PAY REDUCED.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAM.)

AMSTERDAM, MONDAY.

The semi-official Norddeutsche Allegemeine Zeitung states that an Imperial order has been published, reducing the extra service pay in the German Army from October 1st. For example, the extra service pay per month of the Minister of War and of Army Commanders will be reduced by a thousand marks each. Similar allowances to officers of other ranks are to be proportionately reduced.

BREAD FAMINE IN VIENNA.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAM.)

ZURICH, SUNDAY.

An official decree published in Vienna forbids hotels and restaurants in Vienna and Lower Austria to supply bread of any description to guests, who must bring their own. Vienna has been suffering from a bread famine for several days. The newspapers attribute it to a blunder of the Administration, coupled with difficulties in transporting grain and flour. The railway service has been greatly dislocated since Rumania's entry into the war.

THE RAID ON ESSEN.

(PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.)

AMSTERDAM, MONDAY.

The following is a fuller version of the German account of the air raid on Essen:—The General in command at Münster reports that on Sunday, about three in the afternoon, several airmen appeared over the suburb of Essen. Within a minute several small bombs were dropped in the centre of the town. Most of them caused no damage. Fires did not break out anywhere. Unhappily, several children at play were injured by bombs. After throwing bombs from a very great height, the airmen disappeared in a bank of cloud.

ST. DENYS WESTREM RAID.

(PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.)

AMSTERDAM, MONDAY.

According to a telegram from the frontier to the Telegraaf, seven aeroplanes participated in the raid on the aerodrome at St. Denys Westrem, near Ghent, last Friday. Shortly after noon over forty bombs fell in quick succession on two sheds, three aeroplanes being burned and some forty Germans killed or seriously wounded. All the Allied aeroplanes returned safely.

DUTCH EAST INDIAN REVOLT.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAM.)

AMSTERDAM, MONDAY.

A telegram from Soerabaja to the Handelsblad, dated yesterday, says that according to reports from the district of the Batang Hari, three hundred insurgents, on the 20th, attacked Soeara and burned the Post Office. Bangko is quiet. All attacks in the neighbourhood have been repulsed without loss. Three infantry brigades, under Captain De Greve, and a body of armed police, have arrived at Moeara Tebo.

RUMANIAN REPORT.

The official report issued in Bukharest on Sunday reads:—

North and North-Western Fronts.—In the Caliman Mountains our advance continues.

We captured 73 prisoners and one machine gun.

At Hermannstadt we attacked the enemy, capturing four officers, 100 men, and five machine guns.

In Jiu Valley partial actions took place. The enemy were repulsed, and we captured two machine guns.

The total number of prisoners captured hitherto on this front is 48 officers and 6,836 men.

On the Southern front there has been an exchange of artillery fire on the bank of the Danube.

In the Dobrudja our left flank made progress. We captured one officer and 53 men.

GERMAN DESPATCH.

The following German despatch was issued yesterday:—

Army group of General von Mackensen.—Fighting favourable to the allied troops took place south of the line, Cobadine-Toprasson.

The fortress of Bukharest was bombarded by one of our airships.

ANOTHER AIR RAID.

ON EAST AND NORTH-EAST COASTS.

AIRSHIP OFF THE SOUTH COAST.

PRESS BUREAU, TUESDAY, 12.15 A.M.

The following communiqué was issued by the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief the Home Forces at 11.45 p.m.:—

Several hostile airships crossed the east and north-east coasts between 10.30 p.m. and midnight.

Bombs are reported to have been dropped at several places in the northern and north midland counties.

An airship has also been reported off the south coast.

No reports of casualties or damage have been received.

The Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief the Home Forces issued the following communiqué at 3.15 a.m.:—

Several hostile airships, probably six in number, visited the North-Eastern and Southern counties during the night.

Bombs were dropped in the Northern counties, and some casualties and damage are reported.

Full reports have not yet been received.

DISMANTLING THE FALLEN ZEPPELIN.

GERMAN OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

A Berlin official telegram issued yesterday says:—

During the night of September 23 several naval airships dropped bombs on London, places of military importance on the Humber, and in the Midland Counties, including Nottingham and Sheffield.

The result was everywhere observed by big fires, which could be seen for a long time.

On their way, before crossing the British coast, the airships were taken under fire by guard vessels, and during the attack itself were under extraordinary heavy fire with incendiary shells, by numerous anti-craft batteries.

They silenced some batteries by well-directed volleys.

Two airships fell victims to the enemy anti-aircraft defences of London.

All the others returned undamaged

(Signed) CHIEF OF THE ADMIRALTY STAFF.

[NOTE.—With reference to the above, Reuter's Agency learns that in addition to the fact that no anti-craft defences or places of military importance were damaged, the account is full of the usual mis-statements.]

REMOVING THE WRECKAGE.

The Coroner has decided not to hold an inquest on the bodies of the Germans who fell with the Zeppelin in Essex. All the bodies are stated to have been recovered. The Commander appears to have jumped from the ship, as he was virtually unburnt.

The police constable who handed over to the military authorities the Commander and crew of the Zeppelin which came down on Sunday morning has been promoted sergeant, and awarded the Merit Badge for coolness and judgment.

Throughout Monday night the remains of the Zeppelin which came down in flames in Essex were guarded by sentries. Early yesterday morning the work of breaking up the wreckage commenced. Ropes were attached to the girders, which were drawn apart by teams of men of the Royal Naval Air Service, until the wreckage lay scattered over a large part of the field. Search was then made for the important parts of the mechanism, which were removed on motor lorries.

In a barn near the field lie the bodies of the German crew. The road at this point is held by soldiers, who divert all traffic through a neighbouring field.

Quite early yesterday morning sightseers began to arrive, but they found soldiers with fixed bayonets guarding all the hedges surrounding the field. The public were permitted to view the remains of the wrecked Zeppelin from a piece of rising ground some hundreds of yards away, but they were rigorously prevented by sentries from approaching too close. Few souvenirs of any size were obtained by the many sightseers. Every train during the morning brought a fresh load of people to the spot. It is reported that Lieutenant Robinson, V.C., visited the scene early yesterday morning.

During the afternoon several large pieces of the framework of the burnt airship were removed in naval motor lorries.

Some portions of human bodies were found on the ground, which had been cleared of the metal. Among other discoveries was a gold ring inscribed with the words, "Gott Strafe England."

A military officer states that no arrangements have yet been made for the funeral, but it will probably not take place before Wednesday.

Two or three thousand people visited the scene during the afternoon.

Accounts of the damage suffered by the Zeppelin that came down off the Essex coast indicate that she had been rather severely bit by gun fire over the outskirts of London. Those who watched the airship in the gleams of the searchlights are confident that she was hit directly under the tail.

ZEPPELIN'S FIRST AND LAST VOYAGE.

The Central News learns that it has been definitely ascertained that one of the Zeppelins which was brought down was on her first voyage.

MISSING OFFICERS AND MEN.

The Press Bureau issues the following:—

It is particularly requested that inquiries as to missing officers and men may not be addressed to the Foreign Office. The names of all officers and men reported as missing are included in the printed lists drawn up at the War Office, and circulated through the good offices of the United States Embassies in all enemy countries. This system has been found to give satisfactory results.

MACEDONIA.

ALLIES ADVANCING.

POSITIONS CARRIED BY THE BAYONET.

The French report issued yesterday speaks of successful British raids on the left bank of the Struma.

North of Lake Tahinos a French detachment carried a trench at the point of the bayonet. On the left wing the French continue to advance along the whole line.

The Serbian troops have reached the crest constituting the frontier north of Kousotrad, in the Brod region.

BRITISH DESPATCH.

The War Office announces that there have been no developments on our Struma and Doiran fronts.

FRENCH REPORT.

The following official report was issued in Paris yesterday:—

On the left bank of the Struma the British continue their raids, and they made a successful attack on Jâimah.

North of Lake Tahinos a French detachment operating on our right carried a trench at the point of the bayonet and made some prisoners.

From Lake Doiran to the Vardar our artillery displayed great activity.

A vigorous bombardment of Doiran caused an outbreak of fire.

On our left wing we continued to advance along the whole line.

In the region of Brod Serbian troops reached the crest constituting the frontier, north of Kousofrad.

North-east of Florina French infantry carried the first houses of Petorak after lively fighting, and advanced slightly north.

To the west of this town the Russians carried by assault Hill 916, which was strongly organised by the enemy, and in this region a Bulgarian counter-attack, checked by our artillery fire, was driven back by the bayonet by Franco-Russian troops.

South-west of Florina a French reconnoitring detachment engaged in a lively combat to the south of Darste with some Bulgarian elements which had come from Biklista.

BULGARIAN REPORT.

The Bulgarian report of Sunday's date is as follows:—

Near Florina the situation is unchanged.

On Saturday the enemy, after a lengthy preparation of artillery and infantry fire and bomb-throwing, made repeated attacks against the Height of Kajmackalan. Enemy detachments advanced and attacked successively the right and left flanks, and finally the centre of our position.

The defenders, without wavering, allowed the enemy to approach within fifty or sixty paces of our trenches, and then repulsed him with violent rifle and machine gun fire, the barbed wire entanglements causing him heavy losses.

In the Moglena Valley and on both banks of the Vardar there was weak artillery fire.

At the foot of the Bleasisca Plateau the situation is quiet.

On the Struma front there was lively gunfire. Several enemy battalions advanced against the villages of Novolen, Dolno, Karajovo, and Gudelt. They were attacked by our troops and thrown back to the right of the river.

GERMAN REPORT.

The following German report was issued yesterday:—

On Saturday there were again engagements at Florina.

Strong and repeated Serbian attacks on Kajmackalan collapsed.

On the Struma weak English forces, which attacked on an extended front, were repulsed.

ALLIES ADVANCE FROM FLORINA.

SALONIKA, MONDAY.

On Sunday the Allies began a vigorous offensive on the extreme left, westward and northward of Florina, at seven o'clock in the morning, and continued it all day, with most satisfactory results. The Russians, shortly after noon, captured an important hill west of Florina. The French advanced, and occupied the village of Petorak, while the Serbians succeeded in crossing the frontier north of Krusograd, but are encountering fierce opposition at Verbeni.

NOT EASY WORK.

(PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.)

PARIS, MONDAY.

The special correspondent of the Temps at Salonika, telegraphing to-day, says:—It must be understood once and for all that the work of the Allies in Macedonia is not easy, and that the war of to-day does not resemble the Balkan war of 1912-13, or even the German-Bulgarian attack on Serbia of last year. For one thing, revictualling is particularly different, because the roads are practically non-existent, those which exist having, for the most part, to be re-made, especially in respect of bridges. One single line of railway, begun for political, and not for economic, and still less for military reasons, complicates the work, because it necessitates everything being taken in motors. In certain regions mules only can be used for transport, in rudimentary fashion, of the thousands of things necessary to an Army in a country which produces nothing. Above all, munitions for artillery make demands which increase daily. In these conditions there is no comparison between the enormous work necessary behind the lines in the Balkans and the comparatively easy work on the Western front.

FRENCH AIRMAN'S FEAT.

(PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.)

PARIS, MONDAY.

The following account of the sensational landing of a French bombarding aeroplane, containing two aviators, is published by the Echo de Paris from a sub-lieutenant fighting in the Doiran district.

A piece of bursting shrapnel having severed one of the control wires of the aeroplane, he says, the machine began to dive head foremost, and was apparently lost. It was falling within the enemy's lines, to the great delight of the Bulgarians, who gave vent to their joy by loud shouting. When within 100 metres of the ground the observer managed to leave his seat, and succeeded in hoisting himself on to the upper plane of the machine, where, lying on the canvas, he was able to restore the balance of the machine by moving the plane by hand. The motor controls were undamaged, and as soon as the equilibrium of the aeroplane was restored it was able to return to the Allied lines and land without further mishap, with a bomb still on board. Meanwhile the observer was perched on the top of the aeroplane. The Bulgars were so dumbfounded by his daring conduct that it did not occur to them to open fire, which probably would have brought down the two heroes.

THE STRUGGLE FOR KAJMACKALAN.

The Press Association's Special Correspondent at Serbian Headquarters in the Field, writing on September 24, says:—For the past three days interest has centred in the desperate struggle for the possession of Kajmackalan, which is virtually the key to the Bulgarian defences of Monastir. A terrific gale has been blowing practically all the time—a cold, biting wind which numbs and stupifies, and sleet and snow have fallen during the night. Nevertheless, fighting has gone on with a fierce intensity, which has risen superior to the benumbing influences of the raging elements. White fleecy puffs from shrapnel were constantly bursting above the crest, to be swept away almost before they materialised in vapour, while huge bursts from high explosives would linger a moment or two, and then almost instantaneously be dissipated in the wind.

As has been already explained, on the south side Kajmackalan slopes gradually downwards, without any precipitous surfaces. Towards the north and west, however, its features are entirely changed, and its outline is one of rugged, serrated broken rocks, as the mountain sheers down rapidly towards the Starkovgrob range. There are, however, some shoulders which afford a better footing. Here it is that the enemy is established, and is exerting his efforts to recapture the crest.

SERBIAN GUNS ACTIVE.

The Serbian mountain guns are making a vigorous reply to those of the enemy, and, in spite of the handicap of having the wind in their faces, and in spite of the reinforcements which have reached the enemy, the Serbians have been able to push forward, and capture 200 or 300 metres. They are full of confidence that when the weather abates they will complete the discomfiture of the enemy, and capture the whole of this strong position, which

EQUALLY MARKED FRENCH PROGRESS.

The British yesterday reported the repulse of an attack on an outpost east of Courcelette. There was successful mine work north of Neuve Chapelle and Hulluch.

The British evening despatch records attacks south of the Ancre, which were everywhere successful.

Between Combles and Martinpuich the enemy positions have been stormed on a front of six miles to a depth of more than a mile.

Morval and Lesboeufs, strongly fortified villages, have fallen into our hands, with several lines of trenches. Morval is described as a formidable fortress.

The enemy's communications with Combles are now practically severed.

The French announce a number of successful air raids on enemy railway stations and factories.

In their evening despatch they state that the battle on the Anglo-French front north of the Somme was resumed with violence. The French infantry simultaneously attacked, and carried, German positions between Combles and Rancourt, and the defences from that village as far as the Somme.

North-east of Combles they progressed as far as Friecourt, and conquered a great range of powerfully organised ground.

East of Bethune road they extended their positions to a depth of a kilometre as far as Bouchavesnes, carrying several hills by assault.

Upwards of 400 unwounded prisoners were taken.

BRITISH REPORTS.

The official despatch issued from British Headquarters in France at 1.30 p.m. yesterday, says:—

South of the Ancre the enemy attacked one of our outposts to the east of Courcelette, but were repulsed.

We blew up mines last night north of Neuve Chapelle and north of Hulloch.

Much damage was done to the enemy's works.

The enemy's trenches were raided at several points north of the battle front.

Last night's British report says:—

South of the Ancre our troops attacked to-day, and have been everywhere successful.

The enemy's positions have been stormed on a front of about six miles, between Combles and Martinpuich, to a depth of more than a mile.

The strongly fortified villages of Morval and Lesbœufs, together with several lines of trenches, have fallen into our hands.

The village of Morval stands on heights north of Combles, and, with its subterranean quarries, trenches, and wire entanglements, constituted a formidable fortress.

The possession of these two villages is of considerable military importance, and practically severs the enemy's communications with Combles.

A large number of prisoners, machine guns, and other war material have been taken.

Heavy losses were inflicted on the enemy.

In comparison with the results achieved our losses are comparatively small.

Yesterday six enemy aeroplanes were defeated in air fights, and at least three of these were driven to earth in a damaged condition. Three of our machines are missing.

FRENCH DESPATCHES.

Yesterday afternoon's French official report reads:—

On the Somme front there were lively artillery actions in the course of the night in different sectors to the north of the river.

On the right bank of the Meuse we easily repulsed a German attack on one of our works to the east of Vaux Chapitre Wood.

The artillery duel continues intense in the Thiaumont-Fleury-Vaux Chapitre sector.

Aviation.—Enemy aeroplanes at about 8.30 p.m. dropped about ten bombs in the region of Lunéville. A woman was slightly wounded, the material damage done being insignificant.

Yesterday an enemy machine, attacked by one of ours, fell in a disabled condition north of Misery. Three other machines were seriously damaged, and were obliged to land.

Last night twelve of our machines dropped 98 bombs on the village and station of Guiscard. On the same night seven of our machines dropped 50 bombs on the factories of Thionville and Rombach and on the railway station of Audun le Roman.

A fire was seen to break out at Rombach owing to the bombardment.

The French communiqué issued last night says:—

North of the Somme the battle was renewed to-day with violence on the Anglo-French front.

The French infantry, assuming the offensive about noon, simultaneously attacked German positions between Combles and Rancourt and the defences accumulated by the enemy from the latter village as far as the Somme.

To the north-east of Combles we carried our lines to the southern outskirts of Freicourt, and conquered all the powerfully organised ground comprised between that hamlet and Hill 148.

The village of Rancourt also fell into our power.

To the east of Bethune road we extended our positions on a depth of about one kilometre, from Combles road as far as Bouchavesnes; carried by assault a hill to the north-east of that village, and reached on the south-east Hill 130.

Further south we captured several systems of trenches in the vicinity of the Canal du Nord, from the Bethune road as far as the Somme.

The number of unwounded prisoners taken by us and counted up to the present exceeds 400.

There was no event of importance on the rest of the front, apart from a somewhat lively artillery duel on the right bank of the Meuse in the region Vaux, Chapitre, Le Chenvis.

Aviation—During the night of September 24th and 25th a group of our aeroplanes dropped 150 bombs on the stations of Ham, Hombleux, Manancourt, and the aviation ground of Vraignes.

GERMAN REPORT.

Army Group of Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria—The tremendous artillery battle between the Ancre and the Somme continues. Hostile partial attacks against the Combles-Rancourt sector and near Bouchavesnes failed.

Army Group of German Crown Prince—Weak French hand grenade attacks at Thiaumont Work and strong French hand grenade attacks north-east of Fort Souville were repulsed.

(PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.)

PARIS, SUNDAY.

The artillery duel between the Ancre and the Somme (says the French expert commentator) has been of a violence rarely attained hitherto. We are still only in the preparatory phase, but the intensity of the French destructive fire precluded enemy infantry attacks, which have been somewhat reduced during the last four days. This morning the Germans attempted a counter-attack against Bois L'Abbé farm, at the southern extremity of the Bouchavesnes salient, but they were pitilessly mowed down under our curtains of fire, and the attack was completely abortive.

Fine weather favouring the prowess of our aviation, veritable battles took place during the day between the opposing air squadrons—battles which all ended to the advantage of the French. In the course of very many fights twenty-one German machines were brought down or put out of action, successes which magnificently supplemented those of yesterday and Thursday last, which were already days of glory for our war birds. Finally, special mention has to be made, among other bombarding operations, of a raid which denotes the exceptional audacity of the pilots who accomplished it. Two aeroplanes, after traversing Belgium from one end to the other, entered German territory, and flew over Essen, the most vital military centre of the Empire, returning safely after having accomplished in a single flight a distance of 800 kilometres (500 miles). Imagine a bombardment of the celebrated industrial city of Krupps! and the demoralising effect which must have been caused among the population by this intrepid raid.

BRITISH WORK ON THE SOMME.

(PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.)

PARIS, MONDAY.

The Journal publishes to-day an article entitled "The Battle of the Somme," by Colonel Feyler, emphasising the importance of the British achievements. According to the writer, these operations on the Somme, in the middle of September, prove that the British Army, in its turn, has turned to good account the lessons taught by the war. The realisation of this has had sufficient effect in Germany to produce a significant silence on the subject in their official communiqués.

These communiqués, Colonel Feyler remarks, may admit partial failures in face of the French troops, but it has always been one of the standing dogmas instilled into the German public by the Headquarters Staff of their Army that the British forces were numerous, but inefficient. How are they to explain, now, a retirement of the German soldiers before their attack? Outside Germany the event will continue to be found worthy of attention. The extension of the British front at the beginning of the battle of Verdun had been similarly noted. Now it is seen how, taught by their experience on that occasion, the British have learnt how to drive back the German first lines. The two events thus considered together open out new perspectives.

A TERRIFYING DRAMA.

BRITISH BOMBARDMENT ON THE SOMME.

(PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.)

PARIS, MONDAY.

The correspondent of the Liberté in the North of France sends the following interesting account of the artillery bombardment on the Somme front:—

Of all the artillery preparations which have cleared the way for the various offensives on the Somme, none has been of such extraordinary intensity as the bombardment to which the German positions have been subjected during the last seventy-two hours. Without cessation British guns of all calibres are pouring in a deluge of thousands of tons of projectiles on the German entrenchments. Under the iron hail the best fortified works and the most powerfully organised defences crumble and disappear, burying those who man them under the ruins.

From the spot where I am writing, twelve miles from the front, I can hear with strange clearness a series of explosions following one another at a second's interval. The earth is shaking, and yesterday when night fell a red glare illumined the horizon.

"A terrifying drama is being enacted on the Somme," said an artillery officer to me. "I have been through the whole of the Verdun battle, and I have been two months here, but I have never seen anything like the havoc wrought by the Allied artillery yesterday. It surpassed anything I have witnessed."

CONFIDENCE AT THE FRONT.

In a letter received at Portsmouth on Sunday a Staff officer writes:—"Good news from the Somme, and a fine 'top dog' feeling abroad. We feel that we have got the Boches this time, once and for all."

FIFTH GERMAN WAR LOAN.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAM.)

AMSTERDAM, MONDAY.

The Cologne Gazette, in a leading article today, urging the necessity of a big result with the fifth German War Loan, complains that the small amounts are not coming in at the same rate as in the case of the previous War Loans, and that, especially among the farming population, many doubts seem still to prevail. It continues:—"However important and valuable big subscriptions by millions may be, without small single subscriptions our War Loans would never have had such a great success." It urges that all efforts should be made to capture the small investors in the rural districts during the ten days still available. The paper points out that farmers especially are afraid that owing to the gigantic and ever-increasing costs of the war the German Empire must suffer financial bankruptcy, whereby, creditors would lose all their money.

DUTCH STEAMER HELD UP BY A SUBMARINE.

The Dutch steamer Olio on September 9 was stopped by a German submarine and her papers were demanded. These were forthcoming, whereupon the commander of the submarine said he was sorry there was no contraband on board, as he wanted to sink the ship. The Olio was owned by the Olio Netherland Steamship Co., and chartered by the Dutch Government.

DUTCH COMMENT ON AIR RAID.

(PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.)

AMSTERDAM, MONDAY.

The bringing down of two Zeppelins has been the general topic of conversation here to-day, and admiration is expressed at the competency of the British anti-aircraft service.

The Handelsblad considers that the events of the week-end show that the British anti-aircraft service has been adequately organised, and that the English appear to have obtained the necessary experience to enable them to combat these air attacks with success. It adds that in Germany, perhaps, people will now consider whether the danger and expense of these expeditions are counter-balanced by the slight measure of success achieved.

SPECIAL EXTRA.

AN AFFRONT TO IRELAND.

Has it ever occurred to the Prime Minister, inquires the Morning Post, that one of the inevitable results of his dealings with Ireland is to put a deep affront upon that country in the eyes of all Europe? Why is Ireland exempted from the obligation of universal service? We are not even afraid of the word "Conscription," charged though it be with mysterious terrors for the politician. Ireland is not afraid either of the word or of the thing. The Irishman is a born fighting man, and he is never at his best until he is placed under discipline—and well he knows it. The Irish regiments in the fighting line have gallantly maintained their age-long and magnificent reputation, and what they are asking is how their battalions are to be reinforced? The politicians have succeeded, among them, in stopping recruiting in Ireland, except in respect of two or three famous Irish regiments. The Sinn Feiners and their German friends have caused the retention in Ireland of British regiments which would find no lack of occupation elsewhere. Our abject Government have actually descended again in Ireland to the vulgarity of advertising for recruits. They are wasting money as usual. There are no conscientious objectors in Ireland. On the other hand, there are thousands of fine young men who are only waiting for orders—not advertisements—to do their duty. The relation of Ireland to universal service is not a political question, but a military question, and it must be decided on military grounds. If either the Government or the Nationalists can produce a sound military reason for refusing to fill up the Irish regiments, let them do so—and as soon as may be.

CHEERFULNESS AT BUKHAREST.

BULGARIAN ADVANCE STOPPED.

The Times correspondent in the Balkan Peninsula, writing from Bukharest on Saturday, says—A feeling of cheerfulness prevails, and it is generally believed that the Bulgarian advance in Dobrudja has been finally arrested. The journal Rumanie declares that the Rumanian Generals, who doubtless possess much patriotism, confidence, and energy, but little experience, have beaten Mackensen, one of the greatest Generals of modern times. The same journal points out the impossibility for the Germans to send any considerable reinforcements to the Dobrudja front. If they could have done it, they would have already strengthened the Bulgarian front in Macedonia. The retreat of the Rumanian troops at Petroseny, in Transylvania, is generally regarded as a local check, without any influence on the campaign. On the other hand, there has been an advance in the mountainous region of the Bukovina. The operations on both fronts are somewhat hindered by rainy weather.

Sunday—The first through train from Bukharest to Brashow leaves to-day. The Press states that the Hungarian troops retiring in Transylvania have endeavoured to induce Rumanian peasants to accompany them, burning the houses of those who remained, and taking the others. The property of Saxon and Szevler inhabitants is left unharmed.

BULGARIANS THRUST BACK.

The Times Special Correspondent with the Serbian Army, writing from Salonika on Sunday, says:—

The Bulgarians who were still clinging to the north-west slop of the Kajmachalan plateau were yesterday thrust back some 300 yards, the Serbs capturing one officer and ten men.

M. VENEZELOS LEADS GREEK REVOLT.

Mr. G. Renwick, the Daily Chronicle Special Correspondent at Athens, telegraphing last night, says:—During the night M. Venezelos left Athens for Crete in order to place himself at the head of the national movement. On arriving in Crete, M. Venezelos, in the name of his followers, will issue a proclamation, in which he will state that he places himself at the head of a national movement to provide the last opportunity for the Crown and Government to place themselves in line with the majority of the Greek people. There will be no declaration of the dethronement of the Monarch. M. Venezelos will call for a general mobilisation throughout all the island, for the purposes of national defence. He will afterwards visit Mitylene, Chios, and Samos, proceeding from the latter place to Salonika. I learn that M. Leonidas Embericos, owner of the National Steam Navigation Company of Greece, a millionaire, has informed Admiral Coundouriotis, that he places the whole of his great fortune at the disposal of the national movement.

GERMANY AND THE NEW YORK STRIKES.

A New York telegram says:—The latest development in connection with the local transit troubles is the belief voiced by a workingman in a letter to the World that the entire Labour programme, including the proposed sympathetic strike of longshoremen along the whole Atlantic seaboard, is the outcome of the activities of Captains von Papen and Boyed, late German Military and Naval Attachés to the German Embassy. "I don't propose," the writer says, "to do anything to aid a Power that is united with Turkey to conquer the world, which ravaged Belgium, plunged without provocation at the throat of France, wickedly destroyed the magnificent libraries and cathedrals of those countries, sank the Lusitania, with 1,200 lives; shot Miss Cavell and Captain Fryatt, and has broken the law of God and man."

The New York Times also calls attention to the fact that certain German Labour leaders interested in the present strike have been identified with former attempts to promote a strike of longshoremen. Their secret purpose, it is alleged, is to prevent shipments of arms and munitions to the Allies.

GERMANY'S SHORTAGE OF MEN.

Orders were posted throughout Germany yesterday, says the Special Correspondent of the Daily Mail at Amsterdam, summoning for re-examination Germans from the ages of 41 to 46 who have never received training owing to having been passed in peace time as "permanently unfit." The trained men of the same ages found permanently unfit during the war have also been summoned. All eighteen-year-olds are summoned to the Colours by the same order. A large number of these have already joined as volunteers.

DWINDLING AIRSHIP FLEET.

The Aeronautical Correspondent of the Daily Telegraph writes:—The results obtained by the airship raids are not only devoid of military value, but totally incommensurate with the effort expended. The Germans simply cannot afford to continue the raids, for the very good reason that they are proving too costly, and the last two raids cost the Germans the loss of four ships of the aggregate value of £1,000,000, and, far more important, because more difficult to replace, of four trained crews. A couple of months ago Major Baird, the Air Board's spokesman in the House of Commons, gave the total number of Zeppelins destroyed since the beginning of the war as thirty-five. Since then the Germans have lost four more. Now, even the wildest estimates do not credit Germany with the capacity to produce four capital dirigibles a month; in all probability, the real output is less than half this figure. Hence, at the present-known rate of wastage, the Germans are losing considerably more airships than they are able to build, a process which obviously cannot continue indefinitely.

THE CAMBRIDGESHIRE.

"Hotspur," of the Daily Telegraph, writes—It can be stated definitely that Pommern will not run for the Cambridgeshire. As mentioned some time ago, the only engagement he will keep, providing he remains well, is that for the Champion Stakes. Those who fancy Sir William Nelson's Capital for the Cesarewitch will be interested to know that the horse will not run. He has been amiss since running second to Aboukir at Newmarket at the last meeting.

GREEK CRISIS.

POSITION IN CRETE.

INSURGENTS IN CONTROL.

M. VENEZELOS'S VISIT.

It is announced from Crete that 30,000 insurgents, fully armed, are in complete control of the island. Canea, Heracleon, and other coast towns are in their possession. Only eleven members of King Constantine's Cretan bodyguard remain loyal.

M. Venezelos and a number of his supporters have left Athens, presumably for Crete.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.)

ATHENS, SUNDAY.

The situation in Crete seems to be growing serious, as is demonstrated by the absence of news. While it is known that an armed mass meeting is taking place at Canea to-day, the only information available is that communications are cut between the anti-Venezelists at Canea and their partisans elsewhere in the island.

MONDAY.

Cretan insurgent forces numbering 30,000, fully armed, are in complete control of the island. Canea, Heraclion, and other coast towns are in their possession. It is not disputed that the Greek authorities have been forced to turn over all Government buildings to those leading the Separatist movement. The insurrection is considered to have been successfully completed. Of King Constantine's Cretan bodyguard only eleven members remain loyal, the others having been disbanded.

11.40 A.M.

M. Venezelos, accompanied by Admiral Condouriotis and a number of superior officers and supporters, left here early this morning, probably bound for Crete, and he is expected, after making a tour of the island, to proceed to Salonika. The situation is most serious.

GREECE AND THE ENTENTE.

DIPLOMATIC VIEW.

Reuter's Agency learns in British diplomatic quarters that the authorities in London are aware of the contents of the Notes addressed to Germany by Greece on the subject of the internment of the Kavalla garrison and the capture of Greek troops near Florina. These matters, however, are regarded as of quite secondary importance, and as in no way improving the present delicate and unsatisfactory situation as between Greece and the Allies. The impression here is, that the steps taken at a late hour by the King and his advisers are really intended more for the purpose of gaining time, and of creating a favourable impression on the Entente Powers, than anything else. It is believed, however, that in these respects the recent démarches of King Constantine and his entourage will prove unsuccessful.

THE METROPOLITAN OF DRAMA.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAM.)

PARIS, MONDAY.

The Salonika correspondent of the Matin states that the Metropolitan of Drama, who was arrested by the Committee of National Defence on his arrival at Salonika on board the steamer Chio from the Piræus, had often in his speeches and writings insulted the Entente. He had also carried out espionage in the interests of the Central Powers. The correspondent adds that five hundred volunteers from various parts of Greece have arrived at Salonika to join the National Committee.

MESSAGE FROM GREEK RESIDENTS IN LONDON.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAM.)

ATHENS, SUNDAY.

A number of prominent Greeks, resident in London, have telegraphed to M. Venezelos that they have ascertained, in spite of the reserve of British official circles, that the indifference shown by the Greek people regarding the violation of their liberties, the Bulgarian invasion, and the surrender of the Kavalla garrison has created the impression in England that the Greek nation has degenerated, and is unworthy of serious interest being shown in its welfare. The message adds—"We have become a laughing-stock, and are treated with contempt. If such an impression is not promptly corrected the consequences will be much greater for the nation than any territorial losses."

ACTION IN PARIS.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAM.)

PARIS, MONDAY.

The newspapers announce that an important meeting of the Greek colony in Paris was held yesterday afternoon, and was attended by nine hundred persons. It was agreed that the situation in Greece called for grave measures, and a committee was constituted, which drew up a carefully-worded memorandum for presentation to the Governments of the Powers which are guarantors of the Greek Constitution.

EASTERN FIELD OF WAR.

HEAVY FIGHTING.

The German and Austrian reports speak of the failure of Russian attacks in the several sectors.

GERMAN DESPATCH.

The German communiqué issued yesterday is as follows:—

Eastern Theatre of War—Front of Prince Leopold of Bavaria—We have maintained against strong Russian attacks the position near Manajow, which we recaptured on Saturday last by an immediate counter-attack.

Front of Archduke Carl—Between the Zlota Lipa and Narainska the Russians unsuccessfully attacked Turkish troops. Enemy detachments which penetrated the lines were repulsed by counter-attacks. We captured 142 prisoners.

In the Carpathians—Russian attacks against the Ludowa sector were again repulsed.

Transylvanian Theatre of War—Rumanian assaults between Szurduk and the Vulkan Pass were unsuccessful.

AUSTRIAN REPORT.

The following official communiqué was issued in Vienna yesterday:—

Rumanian Front—Between Szurduk and the Vulkan Pass Rumanian attacks were repulsed.

Transylvanian and Eastern Fronts—Lively fighting activity.

Army Front of Archduke Carl—North and east of Kirli Baba fighting continues.

In the Ludowa region the Russians again attacked in vain.

North-east of Zipnica Deina the enemy stormed the positions of the Turkish troops, but were everywhere repulsed, in one sector by a counter-attack.

Army Front of Prince Leopold of Bavaria—The Russians again attempted, yesterday evening, to penetrate our positions north of Perepelniki. Their efforts were without result, while their losses were heavy.

EAST AFRICA.

A COLUMN ON THE MARCH.

"RHINOSCEROSES THAT SPIT."

Continuing his record of the operations of General van Deventer's force in German East Africa, the Press Association's special correspondent with that column writes as follows from Kondoa Irangi on July 19:—

There is a big move on. Exactly what the plans are few except the General know. Since that Sunday in June on which the Germans abandoned their positions in front of Kondoa, after but a slight resistance, and began to fall back on the centre railway line, they must have been sorely puzzled as to the tactics which have been practised on our side. Instead of following up closely and in strength, as has been the usual procedure when the enemy has been forced from any point, the General has apparently been content merely to keep in touch with the enemy, with a view to finding out what his plans might be. But for the last week there has been a decided change. Regiments have been marching away east, west, and south, and there has again been great activity, and Dame Rumour has been very busy. The objective of the next advance has been settled by all the camp strategists as being the railway line, but the point, or points, at which it would be attacked varied within a stretch of country 120 miles in extent.

VAST EXPANSE AND CORRESPONDING TACTICS.

In Europe the taking of a trench is a matter of moment, but in the vast expanse of Africa, when the enemy is forced back, many miles have to be traversed, and plans have to be made for the extending of lines of communication and the carrying forward of munitions, clothing, and supplies by roads which, though good in parts, are gradually disintegrating in the rear owing to the continuous traffic. The extent of the enemy's falling back is decided by the nature of the country. Serengeti, Chala, Salaita, Latema-Reata, and the foot-hills of Kilimanjoro were the first to be forced. Then came the swift-flowing, bridgeless Ruwu, which barred the way to the quick advance of cavalry and guns. The military posts of Arusche, Lol-Kissale, Ufiome, Mburu, Saalanda, and Kondoa were the next to fall, after which the range of almost inpregnable high hills outside Kondoa were the obstacle in the way of a march to the railway from Dar-es-Salaam to Tanganyika.

The worst enemy to-day in front of the South African troops is the lack of water. Water is scarce, and what there is must be boiled before being drunk.

THE ARMOURED CARS.

July 22.

General van Deventer has moved his headquarters. I am sitting in the shade of a wagon by the side of a lake near the junction of the Handeni and Dodoma roads. As I write the column goes by. First, the armoured cars, big, thundering contraptions, which the German Askaris, bearing in mind their wild and apparently blind, but effective, rushes, have named the rhinoceroses that spit. A flight of duck to the lake would suggest peace, were it not that a regiment of cavalry goes by as it settles. Howitzers, with their teams of mules for guns, caissons, and supply wagons hurry past, and reinforcements of infantry march by at intervals. And the grim meaning of all that passes along the road is emphasised by the field ambulances, which are headed for the front. Conveyances and supply wagons vary from the high-powered car of the General and big lorries that could carry three tons if the roads were good enough down to the ox wagons and a ricksha drawn by a mule.

The occupants of the last, in describing their journey, say that they truly work their passage. Herds of oxen—meat, moving on the hoof—also formed parts of the procession, while the new methods of carrying on war were exemplified by the motor cycle rifles, the powerful wireless installation, and the large naval guns and howitzers. The sanitation corps is an assurance that the health of the men is looked after, and the field ambulances provide medical aid where necessary. Water in any quantity is rather a long distance away.

THE GENERAL'S ESCAPE.

Towards sundown the General, who, as has been stated before, likes to make his own reconnaissances, returned from a journey down to within a short distance of the enemy's lines. Coming back his car was compelled to pass through a bush fire. A sudden gust drove the flames right into the automobile. Luckily there was no petrol leak, otherwise there might have been serious consequences to record.

Tissu-kwa-Meda, where the best water supply of the country between Kondoa and the German Central Railway is situated, was captured to-day. Our mounted advanced troops, after a trying march through country devoid of water and grass, charged the enemy rearguard, which was entrenched so well that one could walk right up to the defences before seeing them. But slight resistance was offered. Our casualties, fortunately, were confined to one man slightly wounded. The enemy's losses are unknown. Two wounded Askaris were captured and five dead picked up.

It will be possible for troops to advance now in greater numbers. There has not been a drop of rain for three months, and the wells and pans scattered through the thick bush are mostly dry or capable of furnishing but a scant supply. It is not so bad for the infantry, but the mounted men must water their horses. The ammunition supply and baggage trains also have large numbers of animals, running into thousands.

RAILWAYMEN AND HIGH FOOD PRICES.

The Broadstone Branch of the National Union of Railwaymen has passed a resolution directing attention to the present high food prices, in consequence of which the rank and file find it impossible to provide, from their present earnings, the bare necessities of existence for their wives, families, and dependents. The branch called the attention of the Government to the fact that the railway companies declared it to be impossible to meet the men's demands out of present rates and revenue, and that the men are still suffering inequality of treatment as compared with the men employed on the railways in Great Britain. The resolution states that in the circumstances the men are resolved to support the decision arrived at by the National Union of Railwaymen, in the demand now before the railway companies, for an increase of 10s. per week to all men employed.

ITALIAN FRONT.

ALPINE TROOPS' BRILLIANT SUCCESS.

The Italian communiqué issued yesterday says:—

On the Trentino front the enemy artillery increased their activity. Our batteries replied energetically. A few shells fell on Ala (Lagurina Valley) without doing any damage.

Our offensive in the region between Avisio and the Vanoi Cismons valleys gained for us a new brilliant success. On the noon of the 23rd our Alpine troops took the summit of the Gardinal, 2,456 metres (8,186 feet) in height. At the north-east of Mount Cauriol, the enemy showed stubborn resistance, and left many killed. We took several prisoners. In spite of an immediate bombardment by heavy artillery, the captured position was strongly consolidated by our troops.

Our batteries continue to make reprisals on the military stations of Toblach and Sillian, as the enemy persist in shelling Cortina d'Ampezzo. Last night one of our airships, having eluded the enemy's searchlights, dropped bombs on the railway stations of Dotterglìano and Scoppo, on the Carso. The airship returned safely.

AUSTRIAN DESPATCH.

The Austrian communiqué says:—

The artillery activity of the enemy increased in some sectors of the coast front. During the night a dirigible flew over our lines, and dropped some bombs in the region of the Carso, without doing any damage. In the front of Fassauer Alps two battalions of Alpine troops during the darkness attacked the sector Gardinal-Cimabuse-Alte, which had been subjected to violent artillery preparation during the day by the enemy. After stubborn hand-to-hand fighting, the Italians were bloodily repulsed. Enemy parties attempted to advance against Vorcella Di Coldosi, 52 of the Alpine troops, including one officer, being captured. On Mount Cimone 24 Italians, who had been buried alive, succeeded in extricating themselves, and surrendered. Others are to be heard crying out for help, which cannot be afforded, owing to the fire of hostile artillery. Attempts at their release depend on the acceptance of an armistice offered to the enemy on humanitarian grounds.

THE RISING IN ARABIA.

CAUSES AND EFFECTS.

VIEWS OF A GREAT ARAB THEOLOGIAN.

(PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.)

CAIRO, Sept. 12.

An article that will excite attention, as representing the true Islamic view regarding Turkey's participation in the war and the Grand Sherif of Mecca's declaration of independence, will be published here shortly from the pen of a descendant of the Prophet, El Sayed El Mohammed Reshid Rida, who is regarded as the greatest of all the Arab theologians.

In the course of his article, the Sayed examines in great detail the causes which led to Turkey's gradual subjection to German control and her participation in the war. In so doing the writer repeatedly alludes to the Atheism of the Young Turks, their almost open contempt of the religion of Islam, and their hatred of the Arabs, whom they were anxious to destroy, their ambition being the establishment, with the help of the Germans, of a great Turkish-speaking Empire, with the elimination of the Arab element and language, and the abolition of the religion of Islam, which they regard as the great obstacle to Turkish progress. To this end, however, they will use the Khalifat of Islam until their political aims have been attained, including the extermination of the Arab nations; but then they will do away both with it and with the Koran itself.

A SECRET TREATY.

Incidentally, the writer mentions a secret treaty concluded by the Young Turks with Germany several years before the outbreak of the present war, by which the latter was to reorganise the whole administration of the country. This treaty, which the Young Turks dared not submit to the Turkish Parliament, the writer heard of when he was in Constantinople in 1909. He takes the view that, whichever side is victorious in the present war, Turkey's independence is gone. If the Central Powers are victorious, Turkey remains a vassal of Germany; "and," he adds, "as to her retaining her independence after the German alliance is defeated, it is not reasonable."

A portion of the article is taken up in refuting the materialistic motives which have been attributed to the Grand Sherif's declaration of independence—namely, that he was solely actuated by the desire to save his country from famine caused by the Allies' blockade, and that he is at heart still loyal to the Turkish Government, and incidentally he pays a warm tribute to the British, who, he says, not only exempted the Hedjaz from the blockade enforced against the rest of the Turkish Empire until it was clear that Turkish forces would benefit from that exemption, but also, owing to her respect for Islam's holy places, refrained from making that country a theatre of war.

With this he contrasts the action of Enver Pasha, who, Atheist as he is, at the beginning of the war sought to gain the sympathy of the Arabs in Arabia by sending their Emirs letters in Arabic adorned with phrases from the Koran and passages from the "Hadith." Finally, he wrote asking the Sherif to send an Arab army to assist the expedition against Egypt. The Sherif raised the army asked for, but sent it to besiege the Turkish troops in Medina.

CONCLUSIONS.

In conclusion, the Sayed says:—

1. The Sherif knows that the Unionists are Atheists, who only pose as followers of Islam for the sake of political and financial advantages.

2. The Sherif knows that the Unionists hate the Arabs more than they hate the Armenians and Greeks—firstly, because the Arabs are the defenders of Islam; secondly, because of their military importance, and because they cannot establish a purely Turkish Atheist Empire before they have exterminated them.

3. The Turkish nation has always been known as a strong defender of the Islamic faith, but the subjection of the Turkish people to those now in power at the capital (Turkey, more than any other nation, is subject to her leaders) has killed such a feeling in the people. The Turkish nation is a nation that cannot be governed except by military force, and it is by means of this force that the Atheist Unionists have been able to defeat all the other political parties. Such a state of things made the Sherif see clearly that there was no hope of any Turkish party defeating the Unionists, and, therefore, he decided that it was the duty of the Arabs to oppose and overthrow their power.

4. The Sherif knows, so does everybody else who knows anything about the Turkish Empire, that the Atheist Unionists have deprived the Sultan of all his power and rights, even those contained in the fundamental laws of the Empire. They have just deprived Islam of a lawful religious head, who can give orders in accordance with religious conditions. Now the Atheist Committee of Union and Progress has got full and absolute power in the Empire, and the inhabitants of Constantinople nickname the Sultan "the stamper," because they say that he is there only to stamp and sign the official papers that the Unionists tell him to sign. The Unionists do not even allow the Sultan to choose his religious adviser or his secretary.

A noble of Constantinople called Saady Beik told me that once, while the Sultan was reverently standing and attending at the Holy Reading on the anniversary of the birthday of the Prophet, at Dolmag Baytche Palace, he saw the chief clerk (El Bash Kateb) sitting down, and the Sultan said, "If this . . . (the attribute given by the Sultan is forgotten) does not respect me, does not he respect the Pride of all Beings?" (the Prophet).

In short, every Moslem who has a full knowledge of the policy of the Unionists towards Islamism has become their enemy.

EL SAYED.

[El Sayed El Mohammed Reshid Rida—a descendant of the Prophet—was born in Tripoli (Syria). He showed a ready capacity for learning, and at 25 years of age had entered into correspondence on Moslem social and religious questions with El Sheikh Mohammed Abdou, then Grand Mufti of Egypt, and one of the most famous philosophers of the Islamic world. About twenty years ago El Sayed Rida had to flee from Turkey owing to the tyranny of Abdul Hamid. He then published in Egypt a review, in which he wrote against the Sultan Abdul Hamid, and often criticised the Khedive. He was sentenced to death by the Hamidian Government, and the Khedive endeavoured to hand him over to the Turkish authorities, but the intervention of Lord Cromer saved him. At the end of 1909 he returned to Constantinople and opened a school of theology, but, disappointed with the policy of the Young Turks, he again went back to Egypt in 1910, and opened a similar institution in Cairo. Four years ago a "Decentralisation Party" was formed, of which he became a member, and again he had the distinction of being sentenced to death—this time by the Committee of Union and Progress. Thereafter El Sayed Rida devoted himself to safeguarding the interests of the Arabs, and became the chief of one of the strongest Arab parties. He was elected President of the Scientific Moslem Congress in India, where he was warmly received in all the towns he visited. He has risen to great eminence in the Moslem world. He is very well known in India, Algeria, Tunis, Morocco, and the Caucasus, and especially in Afghanistan, Turkey, and Egypt.]

MACEDONIA.

promises to provide such an admirable base for an attack on the rest of the line. As a matter of fact, it would probably be risky for the Allies to advance along the plains of Florina and Monastir while Kajmackalan and Peristeri, two almost twin mountain masses, which stand like sentinels on either side of the Monastir plain, remain in the hands of the enemy. But the Serbian success will make the enemy nervous with regard to the security of his own lines of communication.

The enemy's position extends from Kajmacalan along the Starkavgrob range, and the right bank of the Brod River, crosses the railway by the village of Verbeni, forms a small salient between Florina town and the railway station, and strikes into the hills a couple of miles north of Florina, following more or less a straight line as far as Lake Prespa.

Since the Serbian victory in the Ranica and the Franco-Russian success at Florina the weather has prevented energetic action in the plain.

THE CAVALRY CHARGE.

However, a very interesting scrap took place last Wednesday. A French force occupying the village of Boresnica was attacked by superior Bulgarian forces, and subjected to heavy fire. Suddenly a squadron of Bulgarian cavalry, which had secretly formed up behind a small wood, emerged into the open, charging down upon the French at full gallop. It was one of the few occasions when cavalry has been put to its natural use, and the sight of these 150 horsemen careering across the intervening space, sabres flashing, and shouting hoarse cries, was a remarkable spectacle. Although met with heavy rifle and machine gun fire, they broke right through the thin line, sabring right and left. Two medical officers attending to the wounded at a field dressing station immediately behind the lines were captured, but the momentary triumph of the cavalrymen was not destined to last. A Serbian volunteer battalion on the French right flank poured withering volleys into the squadron, emptying a number of saddles, including, as was afterwards established, the commander of the squadron, a German officer, and two subalterns. The Bulgars retreated almost as rapidly as they had advanced, but only half their number returned, and they were forced to leave behind the two medical officers whom they had taken prisoners, as well as three machine guns which had temporarily fallen into their possession. Therefore, although it was a gallant, and to a certain degree successful, effort, it is unlikely that its results will encourage the enemy to repeat the experiment of using cavalry. It appears, however, that they did render important service a couple of days previously, when the Bulgarian infantry began to show signs of breaking during the French attack on Florina. A German squadron charged, and, although it was practically wiped out, it gave the infantry time to recover and re-form a mile and a half outside the town.

Passing over the ground of the recent fighting, there is abundant evidence to show that the retreat of the Bulgarians was little short of a rout. The men flung their knapsacks and rifles away, while most of the heavy transport was lost.

The Serbian and French artillery was indubitably the chief cause of the enemy's discomfiture. The state of the enemy's trenches bears witness to the accuracy of the Serbian fire. The Bulgarian losses from the artillery alone amounted to half the men in many companies. The physical difficulties more than explain the slow advance of our extreme left. However, it seems reasonable to expect that superiority of guns and munitions will achieve at Monastir what it has already achieved in the Banica. From our present positions the domes and minarets of Monastir can be clearly seen amongst the background of hills. These tapering emblems of an alien faith have a different meaning for the Serbian, and are luring him on as of old the visions of the promised land drew Israel.

MECCA RISING.

TURKISH GARRISON SURRENDERS.

(PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.)

CAIRO, Sunday.

The Sherif of Mecca reports that the Turkish garrison, which was holding out in the barracks and fort of El Taif, has been forced to surrender. Fifty officers, 1,800 men, and 10 guns, and a large quantity of military stores were captured.

DUBLIN HOSTEL FOR SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' WIVES.

AN APPEAL TO LOYALTY AND GRATITUDE.

One of the needs created by the war which has not heretofore been met in Dublin is that for Central Rest Rooms, where soldiers' and sailors' wives and children who have missed trains or boats can wait till the next train or boat, which sometimes involves stopping in Dublin for the night. Cases of great hardship have occurred where women with young children, after having already been travelling for hours, have no better place for passing this interval than a railway station affords. In some cases the needs have been met by the kindness of those in charge of various institutions, but no adequate provision has been made for them.

A hostel is also needed for wives and female relatives (a) coming from Great Britain to visit wounded soldiers in Irish hospitals, (b) coming from the provinces to visit wounded soldiers in Dublin hospitals, or (c) delayed in Dublin when going to visit wounded soldiers in hospitals in Great Britain. In most cases these visitors are strangers to Dublin, and some of them have little money to spare. Their unhappy condition on arrival under such circumstances calls for better provision being made for their being decently accommodated while in Dublin, at minimum charges. The Soldiers' and Sailors' Families Association long since drew up a list of lodgings and institutions where such visitors might find accommodation at a reasonable rate, but too often it has happened that the lodgings were not available when most wanted. Help has also been afforded by the agents of the Girls' Protection Crusade, but for these cases likewise no adequate provision has been made.

To meet these needs, a house—No. 37 North Great George's street—has been rented, which will provide accommodation for both rest rooms and a hostel, and a committee has been formed to manage the institution. This committee will include representatives of various existing societies—the Soldiers' and Sailors' Families Association, the Soldiers' and Sailors' Help Society, the Wounded Soldiers' Reception Committee, the Army and Navy Women's Social Clubs, the Soldiers' Refreshment Buffets, the Soldiers' Central Club, and the North Wall Soldiers' Club—presided over by the President of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Families Association (Dublin Division). The institution will be undenominational. A portion of the premises has been sub-let to the "Sibail" Club, which is one of several Army and Navy Women's Social Clubs established in 1914-15 for the benefit of soldiers' wives living in Dublin. This Club is under the management of a separate committee of ladies.

The use of the rest rooms will be free, but the soldiers' wives making use of the hostel will, unless under exceptional circumstances, be expected to pay for the cost of meals and for the use of beds. In the nature of the case, however, the institution cannot be self-supporting, as there will be a considerable outlay for rent, fuel, and light, staff, printing, etc.

An appeal is now made to the public for the necessary funds to enable this institution to be suitably equipped and maintained. Having regard to the necessity for economy, it is proposed to furnish the establishment in as plain a style as is consistent with moderate comfort and to supply plain food only, and with a view to reducing the expenses of furnishing, the gift, or loan, of articles of furniture, such as tables, chairs, and couches, will be gratefully received by the committee.

The military authorities have approved of the establishment of this institution.

Notices of the institution will be widely distributed, and there are already indications that it will prove very useful. In no better form can our gratitude to the men who are fighting for us be shown than in helping their wives and relatives when in need of help, and now that the travelling soldiers themselves have been so well provided for in Dublin in the matter of Soldiers' Clubs, Buffets, etc., it is hoped that the comparatively small sum needed for the proposed Rest Rooms and Hostel will be forthcoming. Generous help has been given by members of the Dublin Corn Exchange and others, but much more will be required, and subscriptions, which may be made payable to W. Brown, Esq., 10 Lansdowne terrace, Shelbourne road, Hon. Treasurer pro tem., are requested. Furniture will be called for on receipt of a post card addressed to the Hon. Secretary at 37 North Great George's street. Those interested are invited to visit the institution.

(Signed)

Brigadier-General E. H. Bland.—Brigadier-General E. H. Bland, reported wounded, is the third son of Major-General E. L. Bland, Whiteabbey, Belfast. He passed his regimental service in the Royal Engineers, and in the present war has seen much trench warfare. His brother, Brigadier-General W. St. C. Bland, Royal Artillery, is on active service.

Lieutenant-Colonel B. N. Sergison-Brooke, D.S.O.—Lieutenant-Colonel B. N. Sergison-Brooke, D.S.O., Grenadier Guards, wounded in action, represents a branch of the well-known County Fermanagh family, the Brookes, of Colebrooke. He is a grandson of the late Sir William Brooke, Bart., and a kinsman of the present baronet. He joined the Grenadiers in 1899, was adjutant of his battalion 1905-08, took part in the South African War, 1899-1902 (Queen's medal with three clasps and King's medal with two clasps); was with the Egyptian Army 1908-10. In the present war he has been mentioned three times in despatches, awarded the D.S.O., and in turn has discharged the duties of embarkation officer, staff captain, brigade major, and battalion commander. Lieutenant-Colonel Sergison-Brooke married in July of last year Prudence, daughter of the late Captain and the Hon. Mrs. Sergison, and grand-daughter of Lord Sudeley.

Captain R. D. English.—Captain R. D. English, Royal Dublin Fusiliers, wounded, is one of the many Ulster men serving in the Dublins. He is the son of Mr. R. English, Ballony House, Dromore, County Down, and had seen previous service in the Army, including the South African War, when he was in an Imperial Yeomanry Regiment.

Captain Crozier.—Captain Crozier, Royal Irish Fusiliers, who has been reported severely wounded on the 10th inst., is now reported to be out of danger.

Lieutenant A. J. Cunningham.—Lieutenant A. J. Cunningham, London Regiment, killed in action, was a native of Wexford, and served in the ranks for some time before getting his commission. As a sergeant he took part in the battle of Loos, and there won the Distinguished Conduct Medal and his commission, and was severely wounded. He was afterwards gazetted to his own regiment. A brother of his was killed at Ypres whilst serving with the Irish Guards in the early part of the war.

Lieutenant A. C. W. Innes-Cross.—Lieutenant A. C. W. Innes-Cross, Irish Guards, wounded, is the son of the late Mr. Charles Innes-Cross, D.L., Dromantine, Newry. His brother, the late Lieutenant S. M. Innes-Cross, Royal Irish Rifles, was killed at Mons.

Second Lieutenant L. M. Ekin.—Second Lieutenant L. M. Ekin, killed in action, was a son of Mr. James Ekin, formerly of the Belfast Bank, Dungannon, and Cookstown. He was 22 years of age, and was a member of the Middle Temple, and was going to Oxford when the war broke out. He joined the Inns of Court O.T.C., and got his commission in December, 1914. He was awarded the Military Cross for bravery in the field, but was killed before he could receive it.

Second Lieutenant Aubrey C. White.—Mr. Richard White, Gowran House, Co. Kilkenny, has received a telegram from the War Office informing him that his second son, Second Lieutenant Aubrey Cecil White, York and Lancaster Regiment, previously reported missing, was killed in action while leading his men in the battle of the Somme. Lieutenant White, who was 20 years old, was educated at Castle Park, Dalkey, and later at Trent College, Derbyshire. He was gazetted second lieutenant in October, 1914, and went out to France at the end of last year. He was grandson of the late Edward White, Fort Etna, Limerick, and of Henry Grey Croly, of 7 Merrion square, Dublin.

Mr. H. M. Anketell-Jones.—The death is announced of Mr. Henry Moutray Anketell-Jones, Canadian Infantry, the only son of Mr. H. M. Anketell-Jones, of Burreshoole, Newport, County Mayo.

COAL PRODUCTION.

NEW RECOMMENDATIONS.

NEED FOR ECONOMY.

The Coal Mining Organisation Committee, in submitting to the Home Secretary their third report on the conditions prevailing in the coal mining industry, as a consequence of the war, give the following state of production:—For the year ended July, 1914, the estimated output of mines in the United Kingdom was 281,135,000 tons; July, 1915, 250,368,000 tons; July, 1916, 254,748,000 tons. It is evident from these figures, the committee state, that an improvement has recently set in. Not only has the downward tendency in production been arrested, owing to recruiting of persons employed at coal mines having been stopped, but a small increase has been secured, which is probably to be accounted for by the more regular attendance of miners at work, and the gradual increase in the number of persons employed. The number of miners who, to the end of March last, had joined the Colours since the outbreak of war, was 282,200. The replacements to the same date have been 116,900, leaving a net reduction of 165,300, or 14.8 per cent. of the labour employed in the mines at the outbreak of war. In further observations, the committee states that if avoidable absenteeism could be wiped out it would result in an increased annual output of about fourteen million tons, and they regret that it has only been possible to reduce avoidable absenteeism by 20 per cent. While hoping for better results, they observe that the men who joined the forces were amongst the younger and strongest of the miners; whilst the men who have recently come into the mines are not their equal in point of endurance. With regard to the system of pooling of wagons, various groups of railway companies had effected pooling arrangements with beneficial results, but the proposals for pooling of privately-owned coal wagons met with great opposition from the owners and the Railway Department. The Board of Trade concluded that it was not advisable to proceed further in that direction. The committee gave details of the difficulty of maintaining the supply of imported pit props, and the efforts made to supplement them with a substitute by British grown timber, and committees have been appointed to facilitate such arrangements. The War Office has agreed to allocate 1,000 German prisoners, in gangs of not less than 100, to the felling and cutting of timber, and of these 385 are already at work in approved camps. The export of coal has been reduced to a dangerously low figure—from 73,000,000 tons in 1913, to 43,000,000 in 1915. The action taken by the Government in stopping recruiting of miners, the curtailment by miners of holidays, the abandonment of stop days, and the more regular attendance at work have undoutedly resulted in a marked improvement in the output. But even with the marked reduction of absenteeism, these measures alone are not sufficient. We are convinced, as indeed we have been from the commencement of our inquiries, that if legitimate requirements are to be fully met, economies must be practised in the consumption of coal.

COAL PRICES IN DUBLIN.

THE QUESTION OF FREIGHTS.

The price of coal in Dublin in view of the approaching winter is the question of the hour. It is a heavy item in the household bill of expenses, and the poorer classes are hard set to keep, as the popular ballad has it, the home fires burning. The price per ton yesterday of what has been called best coal was 44s., with a discount of a shilling for cash with order. It is the poor who buy their coal supplies in small quantities—in single bags from the coal hawker—who are most severely hit. They are paying a rate of not less than 50s. a ton for their fuel, and what they receive is nothing like the "best." What people are persistently asking is—What is the cause of the high price of coal? An agent for one of the Lancashire collieries stated yesterday that, in his opinion, the shipowners were the cause. A Belfast mechanical engineer, pleading with the employers of Dublin for more wages for their employés, said that the "coal merchants and shipowners were the villains of the piece." The agent referred to here further stated that excellent coal was placed free on board the vessel at Garston or other ports at the other side of the Channel at 27s. 6d. per ton. Two years ago the freights for coal to Dublin varied from 3s. to 3s. 6d. per ton. These freights have jumped up to 9s. 9d. or 10s. per ton—about three times the rates of two years ago. Even when 10s. a ton is added to the price paid at the docks on the other side, the price here in Dublin would be 37s. 6d. per ton. This gentleman is of opinion that the high freights are entirely unjustifiable. He says that war risks and danger from submarines are now reduced to a minimum in that part of the Irish Sea which vessels traverse between England and Ireland, and that, therefore, freights for this class of trade might well be reduced. The Government, he added, ought to intervene and fix a maximum rate for cross-Channel coal. This would relieve the market at once, and stop the steady upward movement of prices.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

THE LATE LIEUTENANT KETTLE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—As one who was associated with the late Lieutenant T. M. Kettle in a good deal of recruiting work during the past eighteen months, may I be permitted to pay a small tribute to his memory? His loss from a recruiting point of view is irreparable. His rare eloquence, his splendid courage, his red-hot earnestness, and, above all, his wonderful example, were real assets on the recruiting platform. To me it was a great privilege to be associated with one who saw the war in its true perspective. Apart from his unique gifts, Lieutenant Kettle was a most delightful companion. We differed on a great many subjects, but I never met anyone whose companionship I more appreciated and enjoyed.

His was the gift of true culture, plus the art of poetic expression. May I venture to express the hope that Lieutenant Kettle's noble death may prove alike an inspiration and an example to thousands of young Irishmen, and that many of his fellow-countrymen may rush to take up the sword that has fallen from his heroic hand?

May I add that I have had the pleasure of going through some big munition works in England recently, and have returned with the comforting feeling that we cannot lose this war? Munitions are being turned out in overwhelming abundance. The only doubt is with regard to man power. Professor Kettle could have no better memorial than the filling up of our regiments with men of Irish blood.—Yours, etc.,

J. C. PERCY.

THE FUTURE OF IRELAND.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Your leading article in last Saturday's issue, "When Ireland finds Herself," together with "Viator's" essay, raises educational and other questions of vital importance for the future of Ireland. Perhaps, you will accept some observations not intended to be captious or controversial, but made from a different point of view to your own. It may be granted at once that Ireland has much to learn not only from England and the great nations on the Continent—you alluded in particular to Germany and to Russia—but also from nations much less prominent in the eye of the world. But those great nations have themselves much to learn and unlearn, and, perhaps, even Ireland has something to teach others. In opposition to the teaching that Ireland, in order to form herself, must cease to be self-centred, I maintain that the most striking lessons Ireland can learn from the great nations mentioned are those of concentration on herself, self-development, self-confidence, self-respect. I maintain that "know thyself" is a better precept than "imitate others."

Of course, practical hints are to be got from others. No sane Irishman thinks that his country either could or should develop in complete isolation from the community of European peoples. Whether we will or not, we are constantly subject to the influence of ideas coming from without. But the main elements of our problem are here in our own country. The "clean slate" idea is a delusion. It is a complete fallacy to suppose that we can ever cut ourselves adrift from our own past. If we are going to improve ourselves, we must start work with the materials which we have got. Some people apparently want Ireland to be anything, English, French, German, Russian—anything but herself. The war, of course, is exercising a preponderating influence on contemporary criticisms and plans for the future. There is a tendency, if I may be permitted to say so, to exaggerate the importance of the present. But people should remember that at a time of crisis, such as that now existing, everything is abnormal: not only the price of provisions, but the virtues and vices of men. The virtues called forth by war have a strange knack of disappearing in normal times of peace. A Latin historian, with that irritating acuteness of the ancients, has remarked that the course of human history would run more smoothly if the virtues displayed during a process of conquest were equally powerful after conquest had been achieved. My point is that the present crisis is not a time to seek models for our future formation.

One of the strongest tendencies in modern Europe, war or no war, is that cultivation of local particularism which is called either Regionalism or Nationalism: there is no essential difference between them, although the word Nationalism has a more definitely political significance. The tendency is to perpetuate those national or racial phenomena (such as customs, language, dress, modes of thought and feeling, art), which give colour and savour to life. The tendency is undoubtedly a sound one from the point of view of science. It is a protest of nature against artificiality. The object of our education should not be to pull up the past by the roots, and an education which makes the study of the past history of the country an important part of the curriculum is not either antiquated or retrogressive. An education which ignores the past or begins history at an artificially selected point, seems to be a moral and scientific monstrosity. It is hard to see how any effort of mind can efface a past of which that mind itself is the direct product. French State education ignores the history of France previous to the Revolution. That the results have been disastrous is the opinion of the most serious French thinkers. I would like to refer to "L'Etape," by Paul Bourget, or "Les Déracinés," by Maurice Barrès. The title of the latter is sufficiently suggestive.

It is evident that the failure of Ireland, as a whole, to view the war from the same standpoint as England has inspired the bitter criticisms and drastic suggestions which are put forward so frequently. The attitude of Ireland is a source of shame and sorrow, even of despair, to many. A little reflection, however, on the facts of psychology would mitigate these feelings. The judgment of a group of persons upon any event or idea, and the degree of interest they take in it, are entirely conditioned by their previous mental content—to use a Herbartian term, by their apperception masses. This, however, is a controversial question, and I am not seeking controversy, but enlightenment. I would venture to suggest, however, that what we want badly in Ireland is practical suggestions, not cloudy exhortations to do or be something vaguely wonderful. So many suggestions we hear put forward are unpractical because they ignore the principal elements of the problem—that is, the people themselves whom it is sought to mould and improve.—Yours, etc.,

F. C. ORMSBY.

Athlone, September 25th, 1916.

[Mr. Ormsby can only save "local particularism" by saving Ireland. The most practical suggestion which we can give him is that he should use all his influence to send young Irishmen to the Irish regiments in France.—Ed. I.T.]

TURF.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—In these days of alarm, almost amounting to panic, concerning shortage of fuel, is it not strange that so little notice should be taken of our native Irish bog turf? It is true that turf fuel would be of absolutely no utility for locomotive or manufacturing purposes, but for cooking or domestic heating it is sufficiently serviceable, even if a trifle wasteful. It should never be forgotten that "every little helps," and every household which burns turf, or supplements coal with turf, is doing something towards bringing the war to an end, if nothing else.—Yours, etc.,

"BOG-TROTTER."

CONFESSIONS OF A SCHOOLMASTER.

"AVOWED ENEMY OF ENGLAND."

At Brentford Police Circuit yesterday, Wm. George Hollwey Miller, 24, a tutor, of Hartington road, Ealing, was charged with being an absentee under the Reserve Forces Act.

A police sergeant stated that, acting on information, he saw the prisoner, who told him he was not liable to serve, as he was an Irishman and automatically exempt.

Major Smith said that he received information that the prisoner was of military age and in occupation in Ealing, and he called upon him to attend at the recruiting office. The prisoner came to the office and made the following statement:—

I am an Irishman and a rebel, and I took part in the Dublin riots. I am a member of a society hostile to England, and will not serve England in any way. I am an avowed enemy of England, and I will not serve, no matter what course you may take. I am an Irishman, and will not help England in any way.

Witness considered that the accused was a man hostile to England, and should be restrained in some way, no matter what course was followed; but he thought he was fully qualified to serve in the Army.

Prisoner—Did I use the word rebel?

Witness—I think you said so. You said you took part in the Dublin riots. I thought you were frank in your statements, and I was surprised.

At the request of the witness, the accused was remanded for a week.

Fashionable Intelligence.

The Marchioness of Waterford and Lady Blanche Beresford arrived in Dublin yesterday from Curraghmore. They will remain in Dublin till the end of the week.

The Earl of Kingston, after a brief visit to Kilronan Castle, has returned to England.

The Dowager Lady Kilmaine, who has been for the last month with her son and daughter-in-law at The Neale, County Mayo, spent two days in Dublin on her way back to England.

Lord Francis Hope returned to England on Friday from Castle Blayney.

Sir Hugh McCalmont, who spent last week in London, has returned to Mount Juliet, Kilkenny.

Sir Albert Meldon returned to Bray last Saturday.

Sir Pieter and Lady Stewart Bam left Dublin on Saturday for England.

An engagement is announced, and the wedding will take place at Clarina on October 3rd, between Major A. G. Rolleston, R.H.A. and R.F.A., second son of Mr. T. W. Rolleston, 16 Prince Arthur road, London, and Susan, third daughter of Lieutenant-Colonel the Lord Clarina, Elm Park, Limerick.

A marriage has been arranged, and will shortly take place, between Harry Murray, M.D., of Ashbourne, Clonmel, younger son of the late Colonel George Murray, Madras Staff Corps, and of Mrs. Murray, 10 Royal terrace, West, Kingstown, and Kathleen Mary, younger daughter of J. BISHOP'S CALL TO ARMS.

National needs, not only as regards the Army, were the subject of an address by the Bishop of London, speaking yesterday afternoon at the Guildhall, London, in furtherance of the National Mission.

"The first note of the National Mission," he said, "is to be a trumpet note to call for the further million of men which the country now requires. It is the principle on which I would lay stress at the opening of my call to arms, the principle that the country must refuse no sacrifice, and not listen for a moment to any talk of peace, until the Power which, as we know now, has plotted for forty years to disturb the peace of the world is as a military and aggressive Power laid in the dust for ever. The National Mission, if landed home, will shorten the days for the boys in the trenches. The more quickly the nation comes back to God the more quickly will the boys be able to return." The National Mission looked far beyond the winning the war, the Bishop continued. It was not part of the Munitions Act. We look for a new England, a new London, a new Church, a new nation, and a new world. We want no patched-up peace; but if there was a real peace to-morrow, picture the waste of blood and treasure if we go back after the war to our old bitterness between class and class, our old misunderstanding between men and women, or even our old danger of civil war. There was no reason why capital and labour and class and class should not both work together for the common good. What a waste of blood and treasure if the old moral dangers of London are left unaltered. The Bishop referred to the reply of a girl worker to the charges he had made. The writer said that a working girl could walk from one end of our city to another unmolested if she liked. So she could, especially in the poor parts of London; but, as a matter of fact, east or west, any girl who will mind her own business and go straight ahead, and not loiter about, will be unmolested. After paying a tribute to the police, the Bishop went on: "I never pictured London, as the writer of the letter seems to think, as a sink of iniquity. What I was declaiming against in Piccadilly was a class of vice, and traffic in vice, which a pure-minded girl, like the writer, knows nothing about, but which we have to know about, and which we are determined to crush out. London one hundred years ago was more godly than it is to-day. We must keep our Sundays. Last year the cinema receipts in London amounted to £182,000, and the Sunday performances are stated to be on behalf of charities. The charities received £33,000, leaving a balance of £149,000. If that is not a show-up as a blind of charity, I don't know what is. We shall beat the Germans, please God, if we are strong in time, but we shall never exterminate war until the Christian religion spreads throughout the world."

THE SUNKEN TRAWLERS.

The twelve Grimsby trawlers sunk in the North Sea by German submarines on Saturday were The Mercury, Viella, Beechwood, Refino, Rego, Restless, Devonshire, Andromeda, Weelsby, Cockatrice, Britannia, and Kestrel. The Refino, Rego and Kestrel were owned by Mr. G. F. Sleight, J.P. With the exception of John Moore, Chief Engineer of the Devonshire, who was taken prisoner in a submarine, all the crews of the trawlers have been brought into Grimsby.

A later telegram says:—John Moore, chief engineer of the trawler Devonshire, who was detained a prisoner on a German submarine on Saturday, has arrived at Grimsby.

SECOND CANADIAN WAR LOAN.

A NOTABLE ACHIEVEMENT.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAM.)

OTTAWA, Sunday.

Sir Thomas White, Minister for Finance, officially announced to-day that the second Canadian War Loan of one hundred million dollars has been over subscribed by more than 80 millions. Ninety-five per cent. of the subscriptions are Canadian. The banks will receive no part of their subscription of 50 millions. The number of subscribers is about thirty thousand, distributed throughout the Dominion. The Minister said, "the result can only be regarded as one more notable achievement of the Canadian people. It is the more extraordinary when it is recalled that Canada before the war depended for borrowings upon London. The overwhelming success of the issue is a striking testimony not only to the loyalty, but to the financial strength of Canada to-day. No special appeal was made, because I believed the Canadian people required no stimulation." The Minister further said:—"In Great Britain and elsewhere the notable success of the issue can not fail to be regarded as a further and infallible evidence of the spirit of Canada respecting the war, and her invincible determination to persevere to the utmost of her power until a final and conclusive victory is achieved." Sir Thomas White announced that, in view of the great success of the loan, he would at once take up the matter of establishing further large credits in Canada for the Imperial Government to pay for munitions ordered here. He said it was the bounden duty of the Canadian people to save as much as possible for the creation of further credits. In exercising rigid economy and making national savings thus available, the Canadian people would be serving the twofold purpose of high patriotism and good business. Canada had already furnished Imperial credits of 150 million dollars.

OPERATIONS IN EGYPT.

Maxwell by his victories which led to the occupation of Sollum on 14th March, the capture of Gaafer, the dispersal, with the loss of all his guns, of Nuri's force, and the recapture from the enemy of 90 British prisoners taken by hostile submarines. The unification of the command in Egypt made large economies in staff possible, and these were carried out at once. I decided to keep General Headquarters at Ismailia, and to establish at Cairo a General Officer Commanding the Delta District, who would also act as Commander of L. of C. [illegible] For operations on the west I formed a Western Frontier Force, divided into two sections, a north-western and a south-western, divided by a line drawn east and west through Deirut. These staffs and forces were definitely established and at work by 1st April. The whole force under my command now took the name of Egyptian Expeditionary Force. Towards the end of March, at the request of the Sirdar, I undertook the responsibility for the defence of the reach of the Nile between Assouan and Wadi Halfa. Captain F. H. Mitchell, R.N., D.S.O., was sent for this purpose to make all arrangements for an armed naval patrol of this reach.

On 18th March Captain H.R.H. the Prince of Wales took up his duties as Staff Captain on my Staff, remaining till his departure from Egypt on 1st May.

As soon as the conduct of operations on the Western frontier devolved upon me, I took steps, in consultation with the various officers who were then best acquainted with the situation, to estimate the size of the hostile forces with which I should have to deal, and to determine the policy along this front of over 800 miles by which the Nile Valley could best be protected. It appeared from the information placed at my disposal that the Senoussi forces, spread over the whole western desert, did not exceed 3,000, and it was certain that the enemy's moral had been severely shaken by Sir John Maxwell's recent successful operations.

On 15th April the Kharga Oasis, which had previously been reported by aerial reconnaissance and resident agents to be clear of the enemy, was occupied without incident. The movement of troops was effected by the existing light railway, and by the 18th April a force numbering 1,660 of all ranks was concentrated in the oasis.

On the 27th April the small oasis of Moghara was occupied. A strongly entrenched post has been constructed. The occupation of this post has materially assisted in preventing the passage of foodstuffs from the Nile Valley to the west, and denies the water to any enemy force attempting to move in the contrary direction.

ARMOURED CAR AT WORK.

During April frequent raids and reconnaissances, chiefly with a view to capturing concealed depôts of ammunition, were undertaken on the Western front; in these enterprises our armoured and light motor cars have been of inestimable value. On 7th April a detachment of four armoured cars, accompanied by the machine gun section of the 2/7th Middlesex Regiment, conducted a raid from Sollum upon an ammunition depôt at Moraisa, eighteen miles north-west of Sollum. After a very slight resistance from the guard of thirty Muhafzia, twenty-one boxes of 8.9 centimetre Mantelli gun ammunition, and 120,000 rounds of small arms ammunition were taken and destroyed. On 11th April a motor car reconnaissance found and removed eleven rifles and 2,000 rounds of small arm ammunition some twenty miles west of Sollum. On 23rd April an armoured car reconnaissance from Sollum discovered and brought in 140,000 rounds of small arms ammunition from a concealed depôt. On the 30th April a further 20,000 rounds were discovered and brought in to Sollum. During this month, also, four prisoners, including a Turkish officer, were captured sixty miles west of Minia, and two small camel convoys were captured near El Alamein. The light car patrols were responsible for all these captures.

During the month of April reconnaissance was active all along the Eastern front, with the result that by the middle of the month all water supplies of any importance within thirty miles of the canal were patrolled by our troops, and mobile columns were ready to go out and deal with enemy parties approaching them, or, in the event of serious threat, to demolish the rock cisterns.

In No. 2 Section, on 27th March, the 2nd Australian and New Zealand Army Corps came into existence on the departure of the 1st Australian and New Zealand Army Corps to France. The Corps was commanded by Lieutenant-General Sir Alexander Godley, K.C.M.G., C.B., and consisted of the 4th Australian Division, commanded by Major-General Sir H. V. Cox, K.C.M.G., C.B., C.S.I.; the 5th Australian Division, commanded by Major-General Hon. J. W. MacCay, V.D., and the Anzac Mounted Division, commanded by Major-General H. G. Chauvel, C.B., C.M.G. (attached). In this section the wells at Moiya Harab and Wadi Um Muksheib having been brought into the regular patrolling area, a very successful reconnaissance to Jifjaffa was carried out between 11th and 14th April. The manner in which this operation was carried out was most creditable, both to the commander of the column and to all ranks composing it.

In conjunction with this reconnaissance, a mounted column was sent out in No. 1 Section to reconnoitre Bir el Giddi and the roads leading east from it. This force satisfactorily accomplished its mission, and, after an encounter with a hostile patrol, captured unwounded three armed Arabs.

In the Qatia district, where alone there is sufficient water supply to maintain a large body of troops, preliminaries to the accomplishment of our ultimate aim—the permanent occupation of the well-watered zone radiating 15 miles east and south-east of Qatia—were steadily pushed on.

By the 21st April the railway towards Qatia had reached a point upon which a serious advance to hold the whole district could be based, as soon as the necessary dispositions could be made. On the 23rd, however, the enemy attempted to forestall any such advance by making a sudden raid in force upon Qatia. This operation, though comparatively small forces were engaged, produced the severest fighting yet experienced by the force under my command.

HEAVILY ATTACKED.

On 21st April the 5th Mounted Brigade were disposed as follows:—The Worcestershire Yeomanry at Qatia, the Warwickshire Yeomanry, less one squadron, at Hamisah, three miles S.W. of Qatia, and Brigade Headquarters and the Gloucestershire Yeomanry at Romani, six miles N.W. of Qatia. General Wiggin, commanding the brigade, had received orders to dispose his brigade in the Qatia district in such a manner as to protect all railway, topographical, and water survey parties, with special attention to the exploitation of the water supply; also to observe the route eastwards towards Bir el Abd, but not to take any serious offensive measures without further orders.

On the 22nd April the Royal Flying Corps reported to No. 3 Section that new bodies of enemy troops were at Bir el Bayud, 15 miles S.E. of Qatia, and Bir el Mageibra, 10 miles S.E. of Qatia. Upon receipt of this information, General Wiggin obtained leave from the General Officer Commanding No. 3 Section to attack the enemy at Mageibra that night, reporting that he intended to use two squadrons of Warwickshire and the one remaining squadron of Worcestershire Yeomanry. General Wiggin, with Lieutenant-Colonel Coventry commanding the Worcestershire Yeomanry, accompanied the raid to Mageibra. Finding very few enemy, they destroyed the camp, and returned to Hamisah about 9 a.m. on the 23rd with six Turkish prisoners. In the meantime, the post at Oghratina was attacked at 5.30 a.m. This attack was repulsed. No further information was received from the Officer Commanding at Oghratina until 7 a.m., when he reported that he was again heavily attacked on all sides. This attack carried the post, all the garrison of which were either killed, wounded, or captured. No details of the fighting have, therefore, been obtainable. Qatia itself was attacked about 9.[illegible] a.m. Lieutenant-Colonel Coventry was detached with one squadron of Worcestershire Yeomanry from General Wiggin's force to operate towards Qatia. Unfortunately, this squadron became involved in the unsuccessful resistance of the Qatia garrison, and, with the exception of some [illegible] man and one officer who were able to disengage themselves, fell with it into the hands of the enemy. I have, therefore, been able to gather no detailed information of the actual fighting at Qatia.

General Wiggin and Colonel Yorke, commanding the Gloucestershire Yeomanry at Romani, both showed great judgment in dealing with the situation, and did all that was possible with their small forces against the enemy force of about 2,500, with four guns of small calibre. Colonel Yorke, after hearing that Dueidar was safe, moved his whole force at 10 a.m. to attack the enemy then advancing on Qatia. He skilfully drove the Turkish right back to El Rabah, and caused their guns to shift their position further east. The enemy gave ground slowly, but, since by 3.30 p.m. it was evident that Qatia had fallen, General Wiggin determined to fall back; he himself retired on Dueidar by way of Hamisah, Colonel Yorke on Romani. These were followed. Meanwhile, at 5.[illegible] a.m., a Turkish force, 1,000 strong, with one gun, advancing from the south, attacked Dueidar, the most advanced defensible post, which was held by 100 men of the 5th Battalion Royal Scots Fusiliers, under the command of Captain Roberts, 5th Battalion Royal Scots Fusiliers. This officer, who throughout showed conspicuous skill and ability, succeeded in repelling two determined attacks on the post at 6.30 a.m. and 8.30 a.m. respectively. These attempts cost the enemy dear. At 9.[illegible] a.m. reinforcements of two companies 4th Royal Scots Fusiliers, under the command of Major Thompson, 4th Battalion Royal Scots Fusiliers, who had been despatched from Hill 70, seven miles away, on the first news of the attack, arrived at Dueidar. The various posts were strengthened, and a counter-attack, delivered at 12.30 p.m. with great spirit, forced the enemy to retire, leaving 30 prisoners in our hands and 70 dead. OPERATIONS IN EGYPT.

Maxwell by his victories which led to the occupation of Sollum on 14th March, the capture of Gaafer, the dispersal, with the loss of all his guns, of Nuri's force, and the recapture from the enemy of 90 British prisoners taken by hostile submarines. The unification of the command in Egypt made large economies in staff possible, and these were carried out at once. I decided to keep General Headquarters at Ismailia, and to establish at Cairo a General Officer Commanding the Delta District, who would also act as Commander of L. of C. Defences. For operations on the west I formed a Western Frontier Force, divided into two sections, a north-western and a south-western, divided by a line drawn east and west through Deirut. These staffs and forces were definitely established and at work by 1st April. The whole force under my command now took the name of Egyptian Expeditionary Force. Towards the end of March, at the request of the Sirdar, I undertook the responsibility for the defence of the reach of the Nile between Assouan and Wadi Halfa. Captain F. H. Mitchell, R.N., D.S.O., was sent for this purpose to make all arrangements for an armed naval patrol of this reach.

On 18th March Captain H.R.H. the Prince of Wales took up his duties as Staff Captain on my Staff, remaining till his departure from Egypt on 1st May.

As soon as the conduct of operations on the Western frontier devolved upon me, I took steps, in consultation with the various officers who were then best acquainted with the situation, to estimate the size of the hostile forces with which I should have to deal, and to determine the policy along this front of over 800 miles by which the Nile Valley could best be protected. It appeared from the information placed at my disposal that the Senoussi forces, spread over the whole western desert, did not exceed 3,000, and it was certain that the enemy's moral had been severely shaken by Sir John Maxwell's recent successful operations.

On 15th April the Kharga Oasis, which had previously been reported by aerial reconnaissance and resident agents to be clear of the enemy, was occupied without incident. The movement of troops was effected by the existing light railway, and by the 18th April a force numbering 1,660 of all ranks was concentrated in the oasis.

On the 27th April the small oasis of Moghara was occupied. A strongly entrenched post has been constructed. The occupation of this post has materially assisted in preventing the passage of foodstuffs from the Nile Valley to the west, and denies the water to any enemy force attempting to move in the contrary direction.

ARMOURED CAR AT WORK.

During April frequent raids and reconnaissances, chiefly with a view to capturing concealed depôts of ammunition, were undertaken on the Western front; in these enterprises our armoured and light motor cars have been of inestimable value. On 7th April a detachment of four armoured cars, accompanied by the machine gun section of the 2/7th Middlesex Regiment, conducted a raid from Sollum upon an ammunition depôt at Moraisa, eighteen miles north-west of Sollum. After a very slight resistance from the guard of thirty Muhafzia, twenty-one boxes of 8.9 centimetre Mastelli gun ammunition and 120,000 rounds of small arms ammunition were taken and destroyed. On 11th April a motor car reconnaissance found and removed eleven rifles and 7,000 rounds of small arm ammunition some twenty miles west of Sollum. On 23rd April an armoured car reconnaissance from Sollum discovered and brought in 140,000 rounds of small arms ammunition from a concealed depôt. On the 30th April a further 20,000 rounds were discovered and brought in to Sollum. During this month, also, four prisoners, including a Turkish officer, were captured sixty miles west of Minia, and two small camel convoys were captured near El Alamein. The light car patrols were responsible for all these captures.

During the month of April reconnaissance was active all along the Eastern front, with the result that by the middle of the month all water supplies of any importance within thirty miles of the canal were patrolled by our troops, and mobile columns were ready to go out and deal with enemy parties approaching them, or, in the event of serious threat, to demolish the rock cisterns.

In No. 2 Section, on 27th March, the 2nd Australian and New Zealand Army Corps came into existence on the departure of the 1st Australian and New Zealand Army Corps to France. The Corps was commanded by Lieutenant-General Sir Alexander Godley, K.C.M.G., C.B., and consisted of the 4th Australian Division, commanded by Major-General Sir H. V. Cox, K.C.M.G., C.B., C.S.I.; the 5th Australian Division, commanded by Major-General Hon. J. MacCay, V.D., and the Anzac Mounted Division, commanded by Major-General H. G. Chauvel, C.B., C.M.G. (attached). In this section the wells at Moiya Harab and Wadi Um Muksheib having been brought into the regular patrolling area, a very successful reconnaissance to Jifjaffa was carried out between 11th and 15th April. The manner in which this operation was carried out was most creditable, both to the commander of the column and to all ranks composing it.

In conjunction with this reconnaissance, a mounted column was sent out in No. 1 Section to reconnoitre Bir el Giddi and the roads leading east from it. This force satisfactorily accomplished its mission, and, after an encounter with a hostile patrol, captured unwounded three armed Arabs.

In the Qatia district, where alone there is sufficient water supply to maintain a large body of troops, preliminaries to the accomplishment of our ultimate aim—the permanent occupation of the well-watered zone radiating 15 miles east and south-east of Qatia—were steadily pushed on.

By the 21st April the railway towards Qatia had reached a point upon which a serious advance to hold the whole district could be based, as soon as the necessary dispositions could be made. On the 23rd, however, the enemy attempted to forestall any such advance by making a sudden raid in force upon Qatia. This operation, though comparatively small forces were engaged, produced the severest fighting yet experienced by the force under my command.

HEAVILY ATTACKED.

On 21st April the 5th Mounted Brigade were disposed as follows:—The Worcestershire Yeomanry at Qatia, the Warwickshire Yeomanry, less one squadron, at Hamisah, three miles S.W. of Qatia, and Brigade Headquarters and the Gloucestershire Yeomanry at Romani, [illegible] miles N.W. of Qatia. General Wiggin, commanding the brigade, had received orders to dispose his brigade in the Qatia district in such a manner as to protect all railway, topographical, and water survey parties, with special attention to the exploitation of the water supply; also to observe the route eastwards towards Bir el Abd, but not to take any serious offensive measures without further orders.

On the 22nd April the Royal Flying Corps reported to No. 3 Section that new bodies of enemy troops were at Bir el Bayud, 15 miles S.E. of Qatia, and Bir el Mageibra, 10 miles S.E. of Qatia. Upon receipt of this information, General Wiggin obtained leave from General Officer Commanding No. 3 Section to attack the enemy at Mageibra that night, reporting that he intended to use two squadrons of Warwickshire and the one remaining squadron of Worcestershire Yeomanry. General Wiggin, with Lieutenant-Colonel Coventry, commanding the Worcestershire Yeomanry, accompanied the raid to Mageibra. Finding very few enemy, they destroyed the camp, and returned to Hamisah about 9 a.m. on the 23rd with six Turkish prisoners. In the meantime, the post at Oghratina was attacked at 5.30 a.m. This attack was repulsed. No further information was received from the Officer Commanding at Oghratina until 7 a.m., when he reported that he was again heavily attacked on all sides. This attack carried the post, all the garrison of which were either killed, wounded, or captured. The details of the fighting have, therefore, been unobtainable. Qatia itself was attacked about 9.30 a.m. Lieutenant-Colonel Coventry was detached with one squadron of Worcestershire Yeomanry from General Wiggin's force to operate towards Qatia. Unfortunately, this squadron became involved in the unsuccessful resistance of the Qatia garrison, and, with the exception of some [illegible] men and one officer who were able to disengage themselves, fell with it into the hands of the enemy. I have, therefore, been able to obtain no detailed information of the actual fighting at Qatia.

General Wiggin and Colonel Yorke, commanding the Gloucestershire Yeomanry at Romani, both showed great judgment in dealing with the situation, and did all that was possible with their small forces against the enemy force of about 2,500, with four guns of small calibre. Colonel Yorke, after hearing that Dueidar was safe, moved his whole force at 10 a.m. to attack the enemy's right advancing on Qatia. He skilfully drove the Turkish right back to El Rabah, and caused their guns to shift their position further east. The enemy gave ground slowly, and, since by 3.30 p.m. it was evident that Qatia had fallen, General Wiggin determined to fall back; he himself retired on Dueidar by way of Hamisah, Colonel Yorke on Romani; neither were followed. Meanwhile, at 5.30 a.m. a Turkish force, 1,000 strong, with one gun, advancing from the south, attacked Dueidar, the most advanced defensible post, which was held by 100 men of the 5th Battalion Royal Scots Fusiliers, under the command of Captain Roberts, 5th Battalion Royal Scots Fusiliers. This officer, who throughout showed conspicuous skill and ability, succeeded in repelling two determined attacks on the position at 6.30 a.m. and 8.30 a.m. respectively. Both attempts cost the enemy dear. At 9.30 a.m. reinforcements of two companies 4th Royal Scots Fusiliers, under the command of Major Thompson, 4th Battalion Royal Scots Fusiliers, who had been despatched from Hill 70, seven miles away, on the first news of the attack, arrived at Dueidar. The various posts were strengthened, and a counter-attack, delivered at 12.30 p.m. with great spirit, forced the enemy to retire, leaving 30 prisoners in our hands and 70 dead. The Turks were pursued in their retreat by the 5th Australian Light Horse, who had only arrived at Quantara at 1 p.m., and by aeroplanes, thereby suffering further loss. Besides the three and a half squadrons of Yeomanry and details lost at Qatia and Oghratina, our casualties on the 23rd were two officers and 18 men killed, four officers and 21 men wounded. Aeroplane reconnaissance on the evening of the 23rd established the fact that the enemy force, which included a large body of picked Turkish regular troops, was already retiring. At dawn on the 24th eight machines of the 5th Wing, Royal Flying Corps, made a bomb and machine gun attack from a low altitude on the enemy troops left in Qatia, causing very heavy casualties and completely destroying the camp. One machine also located and attacked a large body of enemy at Bir el Abd, and located another party retiring on Bir el Bayud. On the morning of the 25th further bomb and machine gun attacks were made by the Royal Flying Corps on enemy forces at Bir el Abd and Bir el Bayud. Both attacks were extremely successful, working great havoc among men and animals. I cannot speak too highly of the admirable work done by the 5th Wing, Royal Flying Corps, during these few days.

AT SALONIKA.

After 16th January, when General Sarrail assumed supreme control of the operations of the Allied Forces at Salonika, the British Force there commanded by Lieutenant-General Sir B. T. Mahon, K.C.V.O., C.B., D.S.O., only remained under my control for administrative purposes. From the beginning of January to the end of April no active operations of importance took place. The general line of defences remained practically unaltered. Some 200 miles of deep trenches, including communication trenches, 710 emplacements for guns, 230 redoubts or strong posts, 160 miles of obstacles (barbed wire), and 1,300 miles of telegraph cable have been completed; and the defences as a whole are now quite ready for occupation should the situation demand it.

As in Egypt, so in Salonika, the administrative work has been extremely heavy. At the outset the state of the communications was very unsatisfactory. There were only two metalled roads leading to our lines, both in a shocking state of repair; the few existing tracks soon became impassable in wet weather for everything except pack animals. The construction and repair of roads had, therefore, to proceed simultaneously with the preparation of the defences. Roads in the forward area were all begun by the troops themselves, and all ranks worked admirably, the men thoroughly recognising the importance of the matter. Later, it was found possible to organise local civilian labour companies, who have been largely employed to complete and maintain the road work begun by the troops. Altogether about 90 miles of new metalled cart roads have been constructed, and 105 miles of mule tracks, besides some 60 miles of repairs to previously existing roads and tracks. Railway extensions leading to the various depôts on the Monastir road, with the necessary sidings, have been constructed, and Decauville lines laid within the depôts themselves. Preparations have been made for further extensions. Another great difficulty, that of insufficient wharfage accommodation, has been met by the construction of new piers in the bay itself and at Skala Stavros. These have reduced the congestion to an appreciable extent, and fully justified the labour and expense involved.

The supply system, though hindered at first by the state of the communications and by the fact that the equipment of the force with a special scale of transport was only in process of gradual completion, has worked with uninterrupted success. The health of the troops has been excellent, all ranks having benefited by hard physical work in good climatic conditions. In view of the approach of summer, when malaria is likely to prevail in certain districts through which our line passes, special precautions have been taken for the protection of the troops, and, where possible, alternative positions prepared.

Throughout the period the importance of training the troops has been insisted upon. At first one day weekly was devoted to training, as opposed to road-making or work on the defences. This proportion has gradually risen to four days weekly, excluding one day of rest.

On 9th May, under orders from the War Office, Lieutenant-General G. F. Milne, C.B., D.S.O., succeeded Lieutenant-General Sir Bryan Mahon, K.C.V.O., C.B., D.S.O., in command of the Salonika Army. General Mahon sailed on the same date to take up command of the Western Frontier Force in Egypt.

In Egypt during the month of May there was no major operation to record. Intelligence received early in the month showed that the Turks had materially increased their numbers in Sinai, doubtless with the view of detaining troops in Egypt. The enemy's main concentrations were too far away from me to strike at them, and I was in hopes that he might be induced to cross the barrier of hills which extends from north to south some sixty miles from the Canal: he would then have been exposed to attack with the defiles behind him. However, he made no such advance, and, during the hot weather in the middle of May, there were indications that he was drawing in his advanced posts. On the 8th and 21st May enemy aircraft attacked Port Said with bombs, doing no material damage.

BOMBARDMENT OF EL ARISH.

On the 18th May a very successful bombardment of El Arish from the sea and the air was carried out. A sloop and two monitors of His Majesty's Navy bombarded the town, reducing the fort S.W. of the town to ruins and damaging the aerodrome. The seaplanes of the Royal Naval Air Service then attacked with bombs, being followed later by six machines of the Royal Flying Corps, who had orders to attack any enemy aircraft that appeared and to bomb the enemy's camp and troops. The camps were effectively bombed, and three bombs exploded in the middle of a body of a thousand men who were on the march south of the town. A close reconnaissance of El Arish from the air was made, and many valuable photographs taken at the same time. All ships and aircraft returned safely.

By means of patrols of Imperial Camel Corps and motor cars, communication between the oases occupied by the enemy and the Nile Valley and Delta has been rendered almost impossible.

The Aulad Ali tribes in Egyptian territory are now all west of Barrani, except for a receiving camp at Sollum. Markets have been established for the sale of food at Sollum, Mersa Matruh, Dabaa, El Hamman, and Wadi Natrun, where they are allowed to purchase what is necessary for their daily needs. This restricts indiscriminate movement to the west or to the Delta.

In spite of the occupation, during very hot weather, of so many advanced posts in the desert or on its edge, I am glad to report that the health of the troops has been remarkably good. I much regret, however, that General Sir Bryan Mahon, shortly after his arrival in this country to take up the command of the Western Frontier Force, had to be invalided home owing to severe sunstroke. In the meantime, Major-General A. G. Dallas, C.B., has continued, with great ability, in temporary command of that force.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.

I beg to acknowledge with great respect the valuable assistance I have received from His Highness the Sultan of Egypt. He has with great kindness placed at my disposal his unrivalled knowledge of affairs affecting his country.

To His Excellency the High Commissioner, Lieutenant-Colonel Sir A. H. McMahon, G.C.V.O., K.C.I.E., C.S.I., and to the Government of Egypt, I owe a deep debt of gratitude for whole-hearted co-operation and help.

I am very greatly indebted to Vice-Admiral Sir R. E. Wemyss, K.C.B., C.M.G., M.V.O., and the naval forces under his command for constant assistance and active co-operation.

The construction of roads, waterworks, and kindred tasks in connection with the Canal defences, which I have described to you, owe their accomplishment in a very large measure to the admirable services of Colonel Sir Murdoch Macdonald, K.C.M.G., of the Public Works Department of Egypt. His wide experience and capacity have been an indispensable asset to me in dealing with these important problems.

I am particularly indebted to the Railway Department, under Colonel Sir George Macauley, K.C.M.G., R. of O., Royal Engineers, for the highly successful manner in which railway communication has been carried on under great difficulties. The movement of a large number of troops and impedimenta of an Army has severely taxed the capacity of the railway, and has put a great strain on its staff. That it never failed to accomplish what was desired is due to the high efficiency this department has attained, and to the personal exertions of Colonel Sir George Macauley.

I wish to bring to your notice the very responsible and important duties that have fallen to my Director of Army Signals, Brigadier-General M. G. E. Bowman-Manifold, D.S.O., R.E., and to the admirable way in which he has discharged them.

Military operations on the two fronts have been spread over a very wide front, amounting to close on 1,000 miles in the west and 90 miles in the east. Prompt and reliable inter-communication has been a matter of vital importance.

In the successful achievement of this I beg also to bring to your notice the services of the Egyptian Telegraph Department under Lieutenant-Colonel J. S. Liddell, D.S.O., Royal Engineers, and to express my thanks to the Eastern Telegraph Company and the Telephone Company of Egypt, who have given my Director of Army Signals unceasing valuable help.

I beg to bring to notice the valuable services rendered to the Canal defences by the representative and principal officer of the Suez Canal Company, Charles Comte de Serionne, Agent Supérieur de la Compagnie du Canal de Suez, and by the staff of that company.

The arduous and important work of the care of the sick and wounded in the hospitals has been considerably lightened by a large amount of voluntary aid. I wish specially to mention the work of the British Red Cross Society and Order of St. John of Jerusalem under Sir Courtauld Thomson, C.B.

The nursing services, both English and Australian, have done admirable work, and the voluntary aid of the Sisters of Notre Dame de la Délivrance, working at the Australian Hospital at Alexandria, have been specially brought to my notice.

Finally, and in conclusion, I wish to bring to notice the admirable services of my Chief of the General Staff, Major-General A. L. Lynden-Bell, C.B., C.M.G., my Deputy Quartermaster-General, Major-General W. Campbell, C.B., D.S.O., and my Deputy Adjutant-General, Major-General J. Adye, C.B. No Commander-in-Chief has ever been more loyally served, and no staff has ever worked with less friction.

I have other names to bring to notice for distinguished and gallant service during the operations under review, and these will form the subject of a separate communication.—I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,

A. J. MURRAY, General,
Commander-in-Chief Egyptian Expeditionary Force.

SPECIAL MENTION.

25th September, 1916.

Despatches received by the Secretary of State for War from the Commander-in-Chief Egyptian Expeditionary Force, dated 1st July, 1916, contain the names of officers, non-commissioned officers, and men whose services he considers deserving of special mention, and he recommends them to the notice of the Secretary of State for War, adding that he will, at a later date, submit a further list of names of officers, non-commissioned officers, and men belonging to the Salonika Army, whom he desires to mention in despatches and recommend for reward. DUBLIN AND DISTRICT.

The Question of "Returned Empties."—It was agreeable to learn at the port yesterday that a somewhat simple solution for the shipping crux as regards the return of empties has been offered and, to an extent, adopted. The ordinary steamers have little or no room for these empties, which are being loudly and insistently demanded. It is hoped that some of the colliers that visit the port can be employed on their return journeys in the carrying of English empties, and thus relieve the pressure on the regular cross-Channel steamers, which must carry goods, live stock, and passengers.

Snap-Shot Holidays.—The granting of a holiday yesterday to a Clyde-side section of workers resulted in only about thirty or so trippers making a direct sea trip from Glasgow to Dublin. These folk left home on Saturday evening, and, being due back at work this morning, had but a brief spell ashore in Dublin. A fair number took the shorter route across the Channel at the northern end, and some of them journeyed down to Dublin by train, and continued their homeward way via the North Wall last evening. The "snap-shot holiday," as a Glaswegian described the outing, was all too short to please the excursionists.

Trench Life for Clonliffe Road Residents.—A realistic picture of first and second line of trenches is afforded Clonliffe road residents at present. Not content with constructing deep trenches in the centre of the roadway, and thus holding up the butchers' and the bakers' vans and the general morning deliveries of milk and other household necessaries, the authorities have boldly attacked the footpaths, and are busily constructing another continuous trench parallel with the roadway excavation, and running from Drumcondra to the end of the mile-long road. The redeeming feature of these elaborate earth-works is found in the fact that they unquestionably give a goodly amount of employment, whilst one North Wall steamer line has been constantly employed in carrying from England to Dublin the mile, or more, of huge iron pipes required in the work.

Fire at Parliament Street.—At 9.30 p.m. last night a fire broke out in the basement of the premises 15 Parliament street, which are occupied by the Dublin Distress Committee. The Brunswick street section of the Fire Brigade was promptly on the scene, in charge of Captain Purcell, and the flames were extinguished with the aid of a single line of hose.

Blanchardstown's Good Character.—At the Blanchardstown Petty Sessions yesterday, when the certificates of the licence-holders of the district were presented for signature, the Chairman (Mr. Wm. Bobbett) said he was pleased to congratulate the applicants upon the orderly manner in which they had conducted their houses. During the last two years there was not a single conviction in the whole Petty Sessions area, while there had not been ten local cases of drunkenness in the year, whereas in former times the number of such cases for the same period reached fifty and sixty. That gratifying state of things was, he thought, attributable to the excellent manner in which the licence-holders conducted their premises. Mr. Joseph Mooney, J.P., suggested that an improvement in the morals of the people, or, perhaps, laxity on the part of the police, might be the explanation.

PROVINCIAL PARAGRAPHS.

Teachers and the War Bonus.—At a meeting of the South Westmeath Teachers' Association yesterday, Mr. John O'Brien, Chairman, presiding, a resolution was unanimously adopted demanding a substantial war bonus to meet the extra cost of living. It was stated if immediate and commensurate relief were not given some of the teachers were confronted with starvation.

The Killed in Action.—At the several Masses in the different Roman Catholic churches in Athlone on Sunday public prayers were offered for the Athlone soldiers recently killed in action. The Irish regiments at the Somme who so greatly distinguished themselves are largely recruited from the Athlone district.

Sligo Council and Lieutenant Kettle's Death.—At the adjourned quarterly meeting of the Sligo County Council, Mr. Jno. O'Dowd, M.P. (Chairman), presiding, a resolution tendering the sympathy of the Council to the relatives of the late Lieutenant Kettle and the late Mr. Andrew Kettle was passed in silence on the motion of the Mayor, seconded by the Chairman.

Direct Labour in County Sligo.—The Local Government Board have notified the Sligo County Council of their approval, with modifications, of the scheme formulated for the maintenance of roads in the Boyle No. 2, Dromore West, and Sligo Rural District by a system of direct labour under the charge of the County Surveyor.

Belgian Refugees at Law.—The greater part of the sitting at Portadown Petty Sessions yesterday was occupied with the hearing of cases in connection with a row between two families of Belgian refugees. Matilda Ballon summoned Joseph Peters for assault and for damaging her blouse. There were cross-summonses by Joseph Peters against Mrs. Ballon and her husband, Francis Ballon, for assault. Their worships fined Peters 10s. for the assault and 2s. 6d. costs for damage to the blouse.

Military Funeral in Coleraine.—The funeral of the late Major George Henry Bittles, Army Ordnance Department, in Coleraine yesterday was carried out with military honours. The funeral was attended by military from Carrickfergus and Londonderry, the party with pipers preceding the hearse. The chief mourners were:—Lieutenant G. H. Bittles, of the Royal Naval Air Service, son of the deceased officer; the widow (Mrs. Emma L. Bittles) and her little daughter. At the graveside the usual military honours were observed. Rev. F. W. Cole, M.A., Curate of St. Patrick's, Coleraine, conducted the Burial Service.

The Red Cross at Ballyshannon.—A preliminary effort for the 1916 "Our Day" Fund for the Red Cross and the Order of St. John was made at Ballyshannon on the harvest fair day. The local Voluntary Aid Detachment was assisted by the people of the town and neighbourhood to provide tea on a large scale to meet the extra requirements of the great crowd which assembles for the annual fair. The total sum realised, after deducting all expenses, amounts to £53, as the whole cost of the tea was covered by gifts and special subscriptions. An opposition "Flag Day" was carried out by a number of persons, who sold green and black badges for the National Aid Association for the families of the Sinn Feiners who suffered by the Dublin rebellion.

Seaman Drowned at Derry.—A seaman named Robert Watson, belonging to a trawler which is at present at Londonderry quay, fell overboard and was drowned on Sunday night. A watchman at the shipyard witnessed the accident, and gave the alarm. Several of the trawler's crew rushed on deck, but were not in time to render assistance to the drowning man.

Election of Domestic Economy Instructress.—At the meeting of the Meath County Committee of Technical Instruction yesterday Miss Elizabeth Bloxham, Oldborough, Swords, Co. Dublin, was elected to the position of Domestic Economy Instructress, at a salary of £80 per annum. There were five other candidates.

Naval and Military Pensions.—At a meeting of the County Meath Committee under the Naval and Military War Pensions Act, 1915, Miss Alice Cullen was elected Secretary to the Committee.

The Department and War Bonuses.—Yesterday at the meeting of the Meath County Committee of Agriculture and Technical Instruction in Navan a circular letter was read from the Department, stating that they had before them the request put forward at the conference of secretaries of county committees administering agricultural schemes held in June last for an increase of salary by way of war bonus. The Department had given the matter most careful attention, and they recognised that there was ground for such applications. The granting of a war bonus in the case of secretaries of county committees would render it impossible for the Department to refuse to entertain favourably like applications from other classes of officers similarly circumstanced. To satisfy all such demands would, however, involve an expenditure so heavy as wholly to preclude the Department from sanctioning it. The Department were, therefore, reluctantly compelled to withhold their approval for the granting of a war bonus in the present instance.

HURRICANE AT BERMUDA.

A Lloyd's Bermuda message, dated Sunday, says:—Hurricane on Saturday, wind 75 miles an hour; about £30,000 damage. No lives lost.

DUBLIN STOCK EXCHANGE.

BUSINESS LIGHT. GUINNESS BETTER. DUBLIN DISTILLERS WEAKER. BURKES GOOD.

DUBLIN, MONDAY EVENING.

Dealings were again very circumscribed on the Dublin Stock Exchange to-day, and price movements were somewhat erratic on balance. The advance was continued in Consols, Guinness Ord., and Burke Shares. The Bank market was very quiet all day. Munster and Leinsters rose 1/16 to 6 for a few shares, and Nationals repeated 16⅜. Royals were on offer. In Breweries and Distilleries the movements in prices remain at least interesting. Guinness shares fluctuated a little. The Ord. were strong and only small lots were on offer. The opening price, 27, showed a rise of ⅛, but later 27¼ was paid. The Pref. shares, however, were on offer towards the close, and gave way ⅛ to 11⅝. The Dublin Distillers market appeared weaker. The Ord. opened another 1s. lower at 12s., but 3d. more was subsequently paid. The Pref. closed 66s. to 67s. 6d. nominally, a decline of nearly 3s. a share on last price dealt in. Dundalk and Newry Steam Shares were held for 90s. Marconis were on sale, and closed dull on the Spanish and General Wireless report, which reflects a loss and no dividend, contrary to the statement made at the annual meeting of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Co. The Ord. closed 3d. weaker at 62s. 6d. Canadians fell to 11s., but Marconis were firm at 44s. 6d. There was a complete absence of business, and even closing prices at which dealing might be done in Home Railways outside of Belfast and County Down Ord. Stock, for which 112⅜, a rise of ⅛, was called. In Tramways, Dublin United Ord. fell 1/16 to 8⅛. Dunlop Shares were scarcely changed. Parent Tyre Ord. repeated 22s. 1½d., and while the Def. rose 1½d. to 24s. 7½d., the Pref. eased 1d. to 16s. 3d. Bolands Debs. were ¼ higher at 8¼. Drapery Shares were firm, but featureless. Calico Printers Ord. fell 3d. to 12s. Coats and Cottons were firm, but Fine Cotton Spinners remain on sale at a decline on last marking. Vickers Ord. rose 3s. 1½d. to 40s. E. and J. Burke Shares were in keen request, and both the Ord. and Pref. Shares rose 10s. to 70s. and 80s. respectively. The Debs. were wanted. Irish Times Pref. Shares were firm at last prices.

Other business done included Dublin United 3 p.c. (1920) Debs., which fetched 88; Gramophone Ord., 29s.; and Shell Transports 5⅜.

LONDON MONEY MARKET.

Bank Rate (changed July 13th, 1916) ...... 6 p.c.

There was a fair demand for money in the Loan Market, but supplies were fully up to requirements, the effect of week-end disbursements being apparent. Call money fetched 4½ to 5 per cent., the accent being upon the lower quotation during the afternoon. Weekly fixtures remained at 4¾ to 5 per cent. Rather under a quarter of a million was disbursed in various dividends. The Discount Market was quiet, and rates displayed a drooping tendency, good competition being reported for fine paper from neutral centres again. A moderate business was effected in short-dated Treasury bills in Lombard street. October and early November bills were bid for at 5⅞ per cent., while late November bills were quoted at 5⅞ per cent. The Bank of England transacted a fairly brisk business in new Treasury bills at the usual rates. The New York exchange was quoted at 4.76⅜ to 4.76 7/16.

The following foreign exchange rates were current yesterday:—New York cables, 4.76 7/16 to 4.76½; Paris cables, 27.87 to 27.89; Amsterdam cables, 11.67 to 11.68½; Italy cables, 30.78 to 30.83. Petrograd cables, 147½ to 148½.

MINING MARKET DULL.

Only a light volume of business was reported in the Mining Market. The opening tone among the South African groups was steady, but it became listless later. Kaffirs were distinctly dull at the close in the absence of any good lead from the Cape, and some Far Eastern specialities showed a sagging disposition. Diamonds were quiet, and Rhodesians hesitating. In the Westralian and Russian groups there was light trading either way. Base Metal Shares kept in the background, though there was another good rise in Anacondas, in sympathy with New York. The price of copper was unchanged, but the price of tin rose 20/- per ton.

LONDON STOCK MARKETS FIRM.

HOME RAILS DULL. ANOTHER RISE IN STEELS.

(FROM OUR FINANCIAL CORRESPONDENT.)
LONDON, MONDAY.

The Stock Exchange opened the week firmly, but without great display of energy. As the House was open on Saturday, the usual week-end accumulation of business was not up to the recent Monday average, but purchases, though not heavy, predominated in most markets. Members were busy discussing the probable outcome of the petition for a resumption of the Saturday holidays, which was presented to the Committee to-day and considered by that body. No announcement was made as to the decision arrived at during business hours, but a fairly general assumption existed that it would be an affirmative one. Gilt-edged issues ruled quietly firm, with Consols again showing to advantage. Indian Government issues showed increased firmness, and the Three and the 3½ p.c.'s rose ⅛. Colonial issues were firm, but rarely altered to quote.

FOREIGN BONDS QUIET.

The Foreign market was quiet. Japanese issues met a moderate amount of attention and support. Chinese Bonds were dull. Both these groups were affected to some extent by the reported political tension between Tokio and Pekin. Among Continental descriptions, French Fives were steady around 84⅞. Russians fluctuated, but left off without net variation. Greek issues were inclined to heaviness. South Americans were quiet. Argentine and Brazilian issues enjoyed more steadiness.

INDUSTRIAL SHARES IRREGULAR.

In the Miscellaneous and Industrial Market there were few features of interest. There was rather more doing among Shipping Shares, but they did not vary much, and Royal Mails finished 1 down. Prince Lines held their ground at 4⅛. Hudson's Bays, in the Land group, touched 7⅛, but closed unaltered at 7. Marconis were quiet, without change, but there was a sharp set-back of 2/6 to 10/6 in Spanish Wireless. Brazilian Tractions were moderately offered, and fell ⅛ to 60. In the Supply section there was very little going on. Maypole Dairy Deferred fell 9d. De Keyser's Royal Hotel Ordinary was again very brisk around 11/-. British American Tobacco advanced to 99/-. In the Textile group, Courtaulds were firm around 7. Bank Shares were slow.

RUBBER SHARES HIGHER.

The price of plantation rubber is unchanged at 2/4½ per lb. In the Share Market demand was insistent, and prices were higher all along the line. One of the principal features was a jump to 41/3 in Carey United. Another very strong spot was Sungei Bahru, the price finishing 40/-; there were many buyers of these shares in the market, and it looks as if the improvement would go further in the near future. Rubber Trusts showed no change at 26/-. Advances were shown by the following:—Ampat 26/-, Bukit Rajah 8⅛, Glen Bervie 50/-, Lendu 35/-, Selaba 44/4½, Sialang 73/9, Telogoredjo 39/-. Amongst Floriners, Bekoh were higher at 4/1 bid, and Dolok at 2/7½ bid, while Eastern Sumatra were wanted at 2/3, and Majidie improved to 2/- bid. Merbau changed hands in large numbers at 3/1½ and 3/2, while Merlimau showed a rise at 5/11½ bid, and Sungei Siput at 2/3 bid. Bikam, on the other hand, offered at 5/-. There were buyers of Badek at 19/-, and of Bradwall at 35/-; and Mambau Ord. were in good demand around 37/-. Pahang Para were changing hands at 51/3; Pegoh wanted at 53/-, Pilmoor at 49/6, Raub at 42/6, Semenyih at 33/9, and Sennah at 43/6. Serdang Central were wanted at 45/-, Siak at 34/9, and Wampoe at 26/-. In the Borneo section Bode were in good demand around 2/4½ upon the interim dividend of 5 per cent. just announced. Bangawan Non-Guaranteed Shares taken up to 13/10½, and sellers appeared to be scarce. British North Borneo Trust Shares were higher at 17/- bid, and there were buyers of the Options at 1/5½. Kimanis changed hands at 20/4½; Langkon inquired for at 18/9, and Lok Kawie done a good many times between 18/6 and 19/-. The Option Certificates were still rather buyers at 2/6. Manchester showed an improvement at 29/3 bid, and Sablas were wanted at 20/3. There were buyers of Sapong at 31/6, but shares were difficult to get.

AMERICAN COMMERCIAL ACTIVITY IN CENTRAL AND SOUTH AMERICA.

The Board of Trade Journal for September 21st, 1916, states:—

H.M. Minister at Rio de Janeiro writes, in reference to the efforts that are being made by American merchants to develop trade between the United States of America and Central and South America, that the present time is considered to be a favourable opportunity for studying the local situation for the purpose of supplying many of the manufactured articles that have hitherto been imported from Europe.

At the suggestion, it is understood, of the representatives of Uruguay at the Financial Pan-American Congress at Washington, it was resolved that the visit of the Latin American delegates should be returned by Commissions of American merchants specially nominated for this purpose and under the direction of a Central Committee, each Commission being entrusted with the study of commercial conditions in specially assigned countries. Thus one Commission left New Orleans in January last and visited Panama, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Honduras, San Salvador, and Guatemala in Central America. Another has been appointed to visit Uruguay, and a third Commission has already been to Peru, Bolivia, and Chile. A fourth Commission left in April for Buenos Aires, and now (8th August) the Rio de Janeiro papers announce the impending arrival there of the delegates who are to devote their inquiries to the conditions of trade in Brazil.

It seems that other similar Commissions, all of which are of an unofficial character and are composed of business men travelling at their own expense, are being organised to carry out investigations in Colombia, Venezuela, and Ecuador.

NATIONALIST MEETING IN COUNTY WATERFORD.

At a meeting of the West Waterford Executive of the U.I.L., held on Sunday evening at Dungarvan, Messrs. J. J. O'Shee and R. Hazleton, M.P., attended. The President, Mr. P. F. Walsh, occupied the chair, and resolutions were adopted pledging unswerving loyalty to Mr. John Redmond and the Irish Party, and calling upon the Government to immediately release the interned and untried prisoners detained in connection with the insurrection. Mr. O'Shee, M.P., said it was his duty to come amongst them and to give an account of his stewardship. The Nationalists were marking time until the termination of the disastrous war, when they might have the realisation of their hopes in the Parliament of College Green. This state of things existed until Easter, when the insurrection burst upon the country at the instigation of men who, he believed, were fired with the truest sense of patriotism. With regard to conscription, he said that up to the present Mr. Redmond and the Irish Party had opposed such a measure to be applied to Ireland, and they would oppose it to the last.

Mr. Richard Hazleton said it was a great pleasure for him to come to Dungarvan. When last he was there they had high hopes—hopes of a century were about to be realised, but events had occurred since then that had upset all Europe. There was only one policy that the Irish people could place reliance on, and that was the policy of trust in themselves. They should be self-reliant, independent of American opinion or of the foolish whispering of Germany or of any other Power. If they were united, they would be able to fight any odds, no matter how overwhelming, and victory should, and would, be theirs. (Applause.)
